Cuts In Ag Research Funds May Hurt Farmers

The Pennsylvania Senate Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee and the Agricultural Issues Forum met Wednesday morning to speak about a variety of issues. Speaking at the meeting were, left to right, Jay Rush, CEO, York Farm Credit; Dwight Frymyer, Juniata dairy farmer; Jay Howes, manager of ag services for the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce; and Ken Rutt, Lancaster dairy farmer. Photo by Andy Andrews.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania agriculture will take the brunt of recent state cost-cutting measures, particularly ag research funding, which could dig into the pockets of farmers, according to one ag industry representative.

In addition, proposed nutrient management legislation, unless key wording is changed, could also run many farmers out of business.

Those were the key issues bandied about during a Wednesday morning meeting at the state capitol. The Agricultural Issues Forum and the Pennsylvania Senate Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee met to discuss issues pertinent to area farmers. (The presentations do not represent the views of the Ag Issues Forum, but were used to stimulate discussion.)

Presentations on agricultural competitiveness, ag regulations in the bank lending environment, proposed nutrient management legislation changes, and ag research cutbacks were provided.

Agriculture hurt

According to Jay Howes, manager of agricultural services for the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry, agriculture will be hurt by the actions of the Governor's office in placing $1.4 million of ag research funds "into so-called 'budgetary reserves.'" According to Howes, this represents 57 percent of the money orginally allocated and is in addition to cuts in research dollars to the University of Pennsylvania, Penn State University, and ag extension services.

"The cumulative effect of such

Poultry Federation Takes Measures Against Salmonella Enteritidis

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Poultry producers continue to grapple with salmonella outbreaks that appear to be concentrated in the northeastern part of the U.S.

The Pennsylvania Poultry Federation sponsored a meeting for poultry producers to give them the latest information on preventive measures to stop the spread of the bacteria, which can cause food poisoning if eggs or poultry are not handled properly. If eggs and poultry are properly cooked, the bacteria does not harm people.

At the afternoon meeting, Dr. Sherrill Davison from the University of Pennsylvania, said that an effective control program is multi-faceted and must include clean birds (salmonella free from birth), cleaning and disinfecting of poultry houses, rodent control, and vaccination.

The Federation is concerned with the future of poultry health and wants to prevent SE rather than waiting for outbreaks and then scurrying around to do something about it.

A preventive program is being implemented in the area. It is a voluntary program among producers, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and the USDA.

Participants need to agree to test the environment and the mice in

Board Of Education Ignores Agriculture

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture didn't get the academic recognition from the State Board of Education that was sought recently by the Pennsylvania Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association (PVATA) and several agriculture- and education-focused legislators.

Whether or not the board changes course will become apparent with the results of meetings this past week to finalize its education regulations.

Specific changes to the regulations were proposed to the board by the PVATA for several months, but only recently was the issue discussed by the board.

The issue again failed to come up for discussion against the competition for board recognition by hundreds of representatives from different interest groups, who filled the halls outside the board's 12th floor meeting room in the federal building in Harrisburg.

Bipartisan letters endorsing the PVATA changes were sent to the board from the agricultural and rural affairs committees in both the House and Senate. Also bipartisan

Awards, Reports Given At State DHIA Convention

Managing Editor

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.)—To help the Pennsylvania DHIA annual meeting over the undercurrents of dissension in member ranks caused by the centralization process, humor was added to the format of the two-day program last Friday and Saturday in the convention center.

A cowboy/cowgirl theme set in an early western town, climaxed at the evening Texas bar-b-que and hoedown. The meeting progressed from the arrival of "new settlers at the OK Coral" to the branding of program speakers with telltale names like Sheriff Matt Dillon, Brander Tex, Deputy Chester and Doc Holliday.

In addition, a bevy of dairy princesses rode into town to gun down malnutrition and every other problem associated with the failure to drink milk and eat yogert, butter and cheese.

Indications of the division between the polarized opinions within the organization surfaced only briefly several times during the official meeting. But some private discussions centered on the desire of segments of members to leave Pennsylvania DHIA to move their records and business to other neighboring labs and processing centers.

NORTHEAST BROILER/FRYER PARTS. FEDERAL-STATE.

Trucklot buying interest was still light but improving as lower offering prices attracts some additional buyer interest. Leg quarters are in the weakest position but other items are also reflecting the overall weakness in the market. Retail and distributive movement was disappointing but attractive pricing might stimulate some promotional interest. Trade sentiment was generally weak.

TODAY'S NEGOTIATED SALES AS OF 11:30 A.M.

PRICES PAID PER POUND, ICE PACKED PARTS DELIVERED IN POOL TRUCKLOT AND TRUCKLOT QUANTITIES.

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, Mo.
Wednesday, March 11, 1992

USDA DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY WHEAT PRICES CONTINUED LOWER WEDNESDAY ON LIGHT EXPORT DEMAND; CORN PRICES MIXED, MOSTLY LOWER; BEAN PRICES GAINED SOME STRENGTH ON ACREAGE FORECASTS. WHEAT 1 TO 6 CENTS LOWER. CORN 1 TO 5 CENTS LOWER. SORGHUM 1 TO 3 CENTS LOWER. SOYBEANS 2 TO 3 CENTS HIGHER. WHEAT PRICES DECLINED MODERATELY UNDER LIGHT EXPORT DEMAND, HOWEVER, PRICES WERE LIMITED BY JAPAN'S PURCHASE OVERNIGHT. REPORTS INDICATE USDA TURNED DOWN INDIA'S REQUEST FOR U.S. WHEAT SUBSIDIES, FOR FISCAL REASONS, A FACTOR IN LOWER PRICES. CORN FUTURES CLOSED SLIGHTLY LOWER BUT SHORT COVERINGS TAKEN LATE IN TRADE SESSION LIMITED LOSSES. SOME EXPORT BUSINESS ON BOOKS BUT NOT ENOUGH TO SPARK HIGHER CORN PRICES. SOYBEAN PRICES REGAINED LOSSES SUSTAINED YESTERDAY ON IDEAS U.S. PLANTING OF 92 BEAN CROP ESTIMATED AT 57.2 MILLION ACRES. THIS WOULD BE THE LOWEST SINCE 1976. BEGINNING OF BRAZILIAN BEAN HARVEST ALSO BOOSTED BEAN PRICES, BUT THIS IS MAINLY A SEASONAL FACTOR. REPORTS INDICATE, HOWEVER, HARVEST SEEMS TO BE BEHIND A YEAR AGO LEVEL. TAIWAN HAS BEEN REPORTED TO HAVE BOUGHT 54,000 TONNES SOYBEANS.

EXPORT NEWS: JAPAN BOUGHT 232,900 TONNES U.S. WHEAT FOR 91/92 MARKETING YEAR AND 76,200 TONNES FOR 92/93 MARKETING YEAR. ISRAEL BOUGHT 8,000 TONNES U.S. CORN FOR APRIL. ISRAEL BOUGHT 24,000 TONNES U.S. SOYBEANS FOR APRIL.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

MARCH 16-22, 1992

FULL SAP MOON, MARCH 18

OF EGGS AND SEASONS

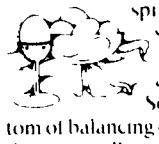
The vernal equinox occurs at 3:48 A.M. EST on March 20 this year. At that time the Sun crosses the equator, moving from the southern hemisphere to the northern hemisphere. This first day of spring signifies harmony and balance in nature as the days are briefly equal to the nights before the longer days of spring arrive. The earth awakens from its winter slumber and signs of new life abound.



Eggs have long been a symbol of fertility and new life and figure in many spring rituals. Some say the ancient Chinese originated the custom of balancing eggs at the spring equinox. The old legend says that eggs will stand upright unsupported on their flat ends at the time of the equinox. In New York thirty dozen eggs reportedly balanced for 15 minutes in 1984. Early risers may want to try it themselves to bring good luck in the new growing season.

Don't say that spring has come until you can put your foot on nine daisies.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Houseplants get a boost when watered with non-saline aquarium water.

EARTHWISE

Many popular houseplants have been found to cleanse the air of toxins and pollution. Some of the most effective plants and the substances they remove are: Aloe vera (many toxins), English ivy (benzene), Dracaena trees (formaldehyde), potted chrysanthemum (general pollutions), many toxins) and spider plants (formaldehyde). Be careful to hang the English ivy out of reach of small children and pets, as its leaves can be toxic themselves if ingested.

PRAGUE COOKIES

½ cup unsalted butter
3 tablespoons sugar
3 egg yolks
¾ cup flour

Topping:
apricot jam
3 egg whites
¾ cup sugar
cinnamon

Cream butter. Add sugar, yolks and flour. Mix well. Spread on a buttered 9" x 9" pan. Cover with a thin layer of apricot jam. Beat egg whites until still and add sugar gradually to make a meringue. Spread over jam layer and sprinkle lightly with cinnamon. Bake at 325° F until lightly browned (about 30 minutes). Cut into squares while still warm.

Makes about 36 squares.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

NORTHEAST: Snowy and cold midweek, sunny, seasonable, east then very cold, more snow.

SOUTHEAST: Cold, rainy north coast and deep south, sunny, seasonable elsewhere, then cold, rain, snow, warm Florida.

MIDWEST: Very cold and snowy, snow heavy east, light in the north.

NORTHWEST: Sunny and warm, east, cold and snowy then milder mountains and coast. Finally cold, some flurries.

OPINION

Shot In The Foot

In Lancaster recently, two brothers with bad blood between them had an argument in a bar. The fight became so intense that one brother went for his pistol and resumed the verbal attack on his brother.

To prove he was powerful and meant business, the brother with the gun wasted a bullet into the ground as a scare tactic. But in the process he shot his own foot and had to be treated by a local physican.

Sometimes when we make judgments about people, right or wrong, the criticism we verbalize about others comes back to do us harm. In fact, St. Matthew suggests that we should not judge others so that we may not be judged and criticized in return. He says that the same measure we use to deal out to others will be dealt out again to us.

A more modern saying is that what goes around comes around again or the American Indian's proverb that you should not criticize persons until you have walked a day in their moccasins.

Sometimes we cut off our nose to spite our face. Or we actually cripple ourselves when we try to enforce our wills on others.

NOW IS THE TIME

By John Schwartz
Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Prepare Pastures For Spring

Before long, cattle and other livestock will be turned out to pasture. Before you do this, you may need to do some preliminary work.

You will want to check and mend fences as needed and pick up any debris that has been tossed into the pasture. To improve the productivity of the pasture, you should lime and fertilize according to soil test.

Liming will encourage grass growth which will reduce amount of weeds. By liming, not overgrazing the pasture, and mowing the pasture on a regular basis, should give you a very productive pasture.

You might want to consider rotational grazing as a method to improve grass production from your pasture.

To Understand Weed Control

Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent, recently identified several factors which contribute to poor weed control.

Several of these factors are date of planting and herbicide application date, occurrence of rainfall, and the rate and type of herbicide used.

Rain is needed to move most preemergence herbicides into the soil profile where weeds will be germinating. A general rule is that 0.25 to 0.50 inch of rain within five days of application will accomplish this and activate the herbicide.

However, this may vary depending upon the solubility of the herbicide, date of last tillage operation, soil temperature, soil moisture, and weed species in question.

Another factor which cause poor weed control is the lack of a crop canopy. A dense crop canopy will hinder weeds from germinating.

To Develop Weed Control Strategies

By knowing the reasons why herbicides fail, you may now develop strategies on how to improve weed control under adverse conditions.

If a herbicide was applied and rainfall did not come in the five-day critical period, a timely rotary hoeing or harrowing may be used to activate the herbicide by moving the herbicide into the soil profile.

This mechanical mixing would have also destroyed the weeds which had already germinated. With the poor weed control from last year's drought, you should expect a larger than average weed crop from the increased number of seeds produced.

In fields with poor weed control, use herbicides rated as excellent for control of those weeds and use the correct rate of application. Remember, when using herbicides, always read the label and follow all directions.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "Pray for a good harvest, but keep hoeing."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WAIT A MINUTE, JESUS!

Background Scripture: Mark 7:24-37.

Devotional Reading: Amos 5:4-15.

The story of Jesus and the Syrophoenician woman in Mark 5 is a troubling one. The problem is how to understand Jesus' sharp rejection of the woman and her request for him to heal her daughter who was "possessed by an unclean spirit" — Let the children first be fed, for it is not right to take the children's bread and throw it to the dogs"! (7:27). It is bad enough that Jesus turned down her humanitarian request, but we cannot help but be shocked when he likens the woman and her daughter to "dogs"!

What is the explanation? Scholars offer several. One explanation is that Jesus really meant what he said, that he did not want to minister to the gentiles and that he shared the common Jewish perception that non-Jews were "dogs" by comparison. This explanation has the weight of the obvious, for it is precisely what Mark tells us that Jesus said. Another explanation is that Jesus would not have responded like this — not if the picture that we have of him in the rest of the New Testament is at all accurate — but these words attributed to him by Mark represent the prejudice against gentiles that existed in the very earliest church.

TO MIMIC & MOCK

The third alternative — which is the only one that is comfortable to me — is that Jesus used these words to mimic and mock the popular sentiments of the day, perhaps even the prevailing sentiments of his apostles, or that he used these words to engage the woman in a purposeful dialogue. In a sense, he could be baiting her, to see just how much faith could be mustered by this gentile. Her response to his refusal would tell him a lot about her. There are several passages in the gospels in which this playful, badgering style of Jesus is evident and I believe that is what is involved in this incident.

And what did Jesus learn through this interchange? That gentiles can be just as persistent and ingenious in responding to the promises of the gospel. Jesus has made several efforts to demonstrate to his followers that even believing Samaritans could be closer to the kingdom than themselves if they failed to respond in faith. This woman, a Syrian woman from the Phoenician coast, wasn't even a Samaritan, but a pagan Greek. Although she had not the benefit of the Jewish faith, her love for her baby and her personal belief in Jesus made the difference.

There are times when we need to do just what she did: to stubbornly persist with Jesus when the answer we're getting doesn't seem to be the answer we should be getting. Whether or not she realized that Jesus was jousting with her, she persists without bitterness: "Yes, Lord; yet even the dogs under the table eat the children's crumbs" (7:28).

A TIME FOR HONESTY

I don't know how this woman knew that Jesus was more compassionate than he appeared to be at this moment. I know because, when I read of Jesus in the rest of the gospels, I see a Jesus who would not turn her away and who would never regard her and her child as "dogs." So, if from our reading of the New Testament and sharing with other Christian people tells us that the answer we seem to be getting from Jesus is not congruent with what we know of him, it is time for us to be honest and say, "Wait a minute, Jesus, surely that is not what you mean to say to me!"

If we do, Jesus will not be angered by our persistence, nor insulted at our honesty.

Farm Credit Bankers Have Long Been Recognized For Achievements In The Field.

Farm Credit bankers possess their share of prestigious achievement awards. But more often than not, the awards they're most proud of are the ones they've earned in, say, conservation, dairy, or veterinary science.

Not many bankers can say that.

That's because most Farm Credit loan officers were born and raised on farms. They grew up active in 4-H and FFA. Many even got their college degrees from ag school.

What's more, every one of our loan officers goes through the toughest ag lending training program in America.

And because our loan officers understand farming as well as financing, they're not only smarter. They're faster. In fact, they have the power of loan approval equal to most bank presidents.

So stop by soon and talk with your nearby Farm Credit loan officer. Because whenever you need some extra help in your field, you'll want to work with the banker most accomplished in his.

Make Every Feed Dollar Count.

Harsh Mobile® Mix Feeders

Total Mixed Rations give your cows balanced nutrition in every mouthful. Harsh Feeders produce TMRs quickly and easily. Here's how: • Four augers mix rations faster and more thoroughly. • Gearbox reduction needs less horsepower than high-speed chains. • Handles many feed ingredients, including long alfalfa hay. With the improved feed efficiency and reduced feed waste you'll get from TMRs, you could increase milk production. In fact, your Harsh Mix Feeder could very well pay for itself! Ask for a demonstration today!

Truck-mount model also available

Ask your Agway sales representative about leasing through Telmark Inc., the flexible financing alternative.

Available only at participating Agway locations.

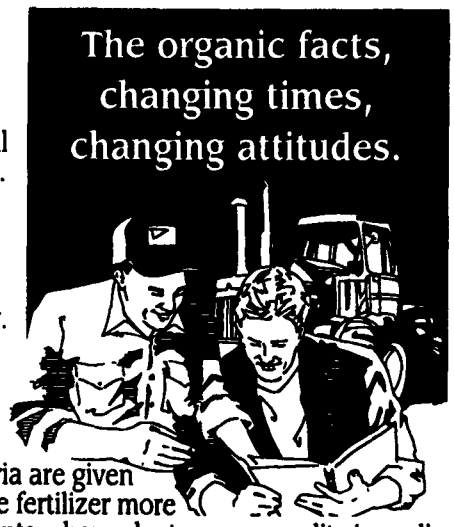
How can a fertilizer that costs $210 a ton save you money? Really big money?



It's simple. With Erth-Rite composted soil builder, you use less per acre. Only 400-600 pounds. So, although Erth-Rite costs more per ton, your total bill is actually about the same or less than a chemical fertilizer. But that's just the beginning.

Using Erth-Rite also restores the natural components of your soil, which aid plants. As microscopic bacteria are given an opportunity, they make the fertilizer more efficient. They hold the nutrients where plants can make use of them, they slow leaching and they virtually eliminate nutrient run-off.

After three or four years of use, with nutrients staying in the soil because of the restored natural components, you'll need even less Erth-Rite per acre. And save even more.

And you'll save even more.

Plants grown with the benefit of Erth-Rite composted soil builder are significantly healthier, larger, and tastier to livestock.

- Resistant to insects–farmers report a dramatic reduction in the need for insecticides.
- Stronger, deeper root systems–will crowd out weeds and reduce the need for herbicides.
- Better roots also give plants tremendous resistance to the effects of draught.
- Plants have higher nutrient levels, with lots of trace elements, and this allows you to cut your feed additive costs.
- You'll probably find your animals are healthier, too. This can dramatically lower your vet bills.

Superb performance from superior products

Erth-Rite carries a full line of soil conditioning products that will fill the needs of virtually any soil to grow healthy plants.

Our products are all organic and 100% safe. You don't have to worry about government restrictions, product liabilities, or personal safety.

Erth-Rite uses only the best quality ingredients. For example, our C-Cal product is calcium that is 94% available to plants. This compares to 10% calcium availability from high-calcium lime.

Give Erth-Rite a try.

We don't expect you to believe everything you read and make a 100% change over night. But we do want you to give us a try with a one-field test plot. You'll see for yourself that organic farming with Erth-Rite produces excellent results.

We'll need the results of a soil test. For your convenience we have our own lab, but we'll be happy to work with a scientific analysis from anywhere.

At Erth-Rite, we have the products and the know-how to help you farm successfully. We have bins and spreaders for rent and do custom spreading. We also have a full line of organic liquid fertilizer. Give us a call for more information and the name of your nearest dealer. Erth-Rite, Inc., R.D. #1, Gap, PA 17527 717-442-4171 or 1-800-332-4171

Lean Beef Fits Healthy Diet

Limousin showed its heart by sponsoring and arranging to have Limousin steak served to 1,300 participants at benefits for the American Heart Association (AHA) in Dallas and Memphis. Among those enjoying the Limousin treat at the Tarrant County AHA Chapter Benefit were, from left, Dr. Wayne Vanderwert, NALF executive vice president; Gary Terry, TC/AHA president and his wife Anne; Lou and Gene Rodgers, president of the Texas Limousin Association; Carlton Noyes, principal of Lean Limousin Beef Co.; and Tom Stewman, NALF president.

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — True to the genetic strengths of the breed, Limousin continues to help spread the word that lean beef fits a heart-healthy diet.

On behalf of Limousin breeders across the United States, the North American Limousin Foundation (NALF) teamed up with other organizations in recently to support benefits of the American Heart Association (AHA).

Between benefits hosted by the Tarrant County chapter of the AHA and by Heart Gala, Inc. in Dallas and Memphis, respectively, NALF sponsored and arranged to serve 1,300 Limousin steaks to participants. The Limousin beef came from Lean Limousin Beef Company in Kearney, Neb. and from LIMI, Inc. in Amherst, S.D.

"Anytime the beef industry can drive home the fact that lean beef fits a heart-healthy diet, we must take advantage of it," said Dr. Wayne Vanderwert, NALF executive vice president. Taking a stand for the beef industry, rather than just the breed, is not new to NALF. A year ago, Limousin, through NALF, became the only beef breed to officially endorse the introduction of McDonald's McLean Deluxe Sandwich. At the time, that sandwich represented the only large-scale attempt by the beef industry to provide consumers with a 90 percent lean ground beef product.

"Industry involvement by this breed is consistent with the Limousin philosophy," said Vanderwert. "For any individual to prosper, the total industry must prosper first. Limousin is committed to helping the industry succeed by supplying consumers with a lean, high quality protein source."

Md.-Del. Brown Swiss Association Plans Meeting

FREDERICK, Md. — Mike Young, director of sales for Genmark, will be the speaker for the Maryland-Delaware Brown Swiss Association Annual Meeting.

The Banquet and meet is set for Saturday, March 21, 7 p.m. at Walkersville Fire Hall, Walkersville, Md.

Young's topics will be genetic markers, in particular the genetic test for the Weaver condition (Bovine Progressive Degenerative Myeloencepthalopathy).

Genmark uses genetic markers to identify and/or predict such traits as identity and parentage, Kappa-casein and Beta-lactoglobulin, defect-causing abnormalities, including Weaver — even embryo sexing.

This company uses the revolutionary science of molecular genetic mapping to predict the occurence of this genetic abnormality called Weaver in the Brown Swiss breed.

Mike has been involved in marketing, promoting, and selling dairy genetics over the past 16 years.

Well-known to Holstein breeders, he has developed international recognition as a marketer of top Holstein genetics, and managed numerous international cattle sales.

His Holstein experience spans more than 25 countries worldwide. He also worked for the "Holstein WORLD," served as executive secretary of the California Holstein Association, and managed his own Holstein herd.

A native of Pennsylvania, Mike has his bachelor of science degree in dairy science from Penn State.

Interested breeders are welcome to attend this annual banquet meeting to hear Mike Young on timely topics in the Brown Swiss and Holstein breeds.

Ag Week Begins

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Robert L. Walker reminds all Maryland citizens that National Agriculture Week is celebrated during the third week in March.

As part of the National Agriculture Week celebration, the Maryland Department of Agriculture will hold its fifth annual Open House on Saturday, March 21 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at its headquarters building on 50 Harry S. Truman Parkway just outside of Annapolis.

During the open house, the headquarters building will be officially dedicated in honor of Wayne A. Cawley, Jr., who served as Maryland Secretary of Agriculture from 1979 through 1991.

EPDs, Indexing Create Perfect Balance In Bull Selection

Second in a series

Editor's note: Commercial beef cow/calf operations rely heavily on good bull records to ensure the value of their herd. Last week, in the first of the bull buyers series, Lancaster Farming spoke to several farmers about the important traits in selecting herd sires and general herd management. This week, we take another look at expected progeny differences (EPDs) and records useful for those who will attend the 19th Performance-Tested Bull Sale at the Penn State Ag Arena during the Beef Expo on March 27.

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — For beef cow/calf operators, it's time to take a long, hard look at your herd.

By inspecting the herd carefully for deficiencies across the board — including birthweights, weaning weights, yearling weights, milk production, and a host of other items — you may be able to come up with the traits that bulls from selected breeds can provide to improve your herd.

And information obtained before attending a bull sale, such as the Performance-tested Bull Sale on March 27 at the Beef Expo, will help you make a decision on what kinds of bulls to buy.

But what goes into determing the "best" bull? And what records are required to help you in the decision-making process?

Tremendous impact

"Environment or management can have a tremendous impact on the performance of an animal," said Glenn Eberly, manager of the Meat Animal Evaluation Center at University Park.

Purebred beef operations in Pennsylvania can nominate selected bulls to be performance-tested and sold. They're put on a 112-day feeding test, where they're weighed every 28 days, and average daily gains are calculated on the bulls.

Feed efficiency for each bull is also calculated. At the end of the test, the bulls are evaluated for structural correctness, including an ultrasound to determine loin eye and fat thickness. The bulls undergo a comprehensive reproductive exam, and other physical exams including pelvic area, scrotal circumference, penis structure, and other factors.

(See the accompanying charts for details on specific factors.)

Breed group

The bulls are compared within a breed group and an index is calculated. "The specific index we use is 50 percent on an average daily gain ratio, 30 percent on adjusted 365-day weight ratio, and 20 percent on fat thickness," said Eberly.

(The 20 percent is based on a 10 percent deviation from the mean of the breed group, or the number of bulls of the breed on test at one time.)

The index eliminates most of the variations that can occur with different types of off-site management. The bulls are sorted by the index — the higher the index, the better price at auction time.

Eberly said "the owner is involved in the process of promoting his bulls and in promoting his operation, too. It gives him an

Bull Testing Program Under Way

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's official Bull Performance Testing program is well under way.

Fifty-two of the state's most progressive purebred breeders have consigned 73 of their best purebred bulls of various breeds to the testing program at the Meat Animal Evaluation Center.

This year there are 27 Angus, 19 Polled Herefords, 18 Simmentals, 5 Charolais, 2 Chiangus, 2 Limousin and 1 Salers.

Upon completion of the 112-day testing period, the bulls are subjected to evaluation including a comprehensive breeding soundness exam, measurement of fat thickness and loin-eye area, and a health exam which includes blood and TB testing, enabling the bulls to be sold anywhere in the country. The bulls must also meet minimum requirements for structural correctness and breed character. Individual feed efficiencies will be calculated for the bulls.

After all of the indexes are calculated and the evaluations analyzed, approximately the top 75 percent of the bulls are selected to be sold at Pennsylvania's 19th Annual Performance Tested Bull Sale scheduled for noon, March 27, 1992, at Penn State's Ag Arena.

The bull sale again is one of the major components of the third Annual Pennsylvania Beef Expo, which is scheduled for March 26-29. The Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Association has their state female sale planned for immediately following the bull sale Friday afternoon.

The Pennsylvania Angus, Simmental, Salers and Charolais Associations will be conducting their respective state breed female sales on Saturday, March 28.

The Expo schedule for Thursday includes an educational program which will cover the topic "Improving Health in the Cattle Herd" and the trade show opening. The trade show will provide door prizes and activities as well as an opportunity to preview what is available in the animal health, nutrition, and equipment areas as well as many other associated products.

Other Expo events include animal exhibits featuring superior cows and bulls and a number of activities for the Junior Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association including a junior heifer show on Saturday evening and a junior steer show on Sunday, March 29.

For further information on the Performance Tested Bull Sale or the Pennsylvania Beef Expo or to request a bull sale or breed female catalogs, contact Glenn Eberly, director, Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Road, State College, PA 16803, (814) 238-2527 or (814) 865-5857.

Board Of Education

endorsement letters from the House and Senate education committees were also sent to the board.

Nevertheless, PVATA President Robert Lauffer, an environmental agriscience instructor at Garden Spot High School, has not given up.

Also, Lauffer hand carried a stronger letter to the board when it met on Monday (to prepare for the upcoming meetings).

The message that Lauffer and others are trying to get through to the board is that agricultural education deserves a place at least as equal to environmental education, which the board has mandated as part of the curriculum.

Basically, the PVATA and legislators are calling for the term "agricultural literacy" to be inserted into the regulations and that agricultural sciences be included into the list of subjects a school must offer students.

The objective is to create an awareness among students that the whole structure of the majority of existing human society is based on agriculture.

Equally important to the proponents, it that young people are better prepared for careers in the wide spectrum of agriculturally tied businesses and activities which demand a coherant and useable understanding of agricultural systems and enterprises, and their direct connections to natural resources, community and personal health, environmental cycles, mechanics, hydraulics, manufacturing, transportation, art, etc.

When Lauffer was granted presence before the board earlier this year, he was questioned as to why agriculture should be mandated.

The question was posed by Education Secretary Donald Carroll, a life-long educator and education administrator. He and others have declared that their intent in forging new regulations is to relax the grip by state mandates on school districts.

The board has been criticized as promulagating regulations which force districts to come up with funds to pay for unneeded course.

Lauffer and the others said that they agree that imposing financial strains on school districts' abilities to operate schools is not the objective of any mandate.

They also want the districts to have flexibility in course offerings, as per needs of students.

But the argument from the pro-agriculture side for making agriculture mandated is that, without mandating districts to make agrisciences available, youth will not have the opportunity of choice in going into a field of study where jobs are available and the future holds much promise.

The board's reaction, to date, has been that the only mention of agriculture was injected the word in the definition of "vocational education."

Actions the board has taken are disconcerting, Lauffer said.

The board has identified several areas of concern, including agriculture, and addressed all the issues in revising the regulations, but still failed to offer anything for agriculture, except for the inclusion of the word in a definition.

According to Lauffer, who has spoken several times with board members in an attempt to get them to at least review their own perceptions of agriculture, the issue is apparently being brushed off as insignificant by the board.

In a letter this week to the board, Lauffer wrote, "It has occurred to me that we as agricultural educators and others interested in the number one industry in our state must not be communicating clearly enough, or perhaps loudly enough, for the State Board of Education to hear us and understand what agricultural education is all about.

"I don't believe this is a case of willful neglect; you all seem like reasonable and sincere individuals. I believe it is possible that some of the problem may stem from a level of agricultural illiteracy on the State Board of Education.

"I do not say that in a way that is meant to be critical. It just seems apparent to me that there is a fundamental lack of understanding of the importance of . . . agriculture and agriculture education by the State Board of Education.

"A quick review of the addresses of the memebers of the board leads me to the distinct possibility that the vast majority, if not all board members, are not directly involved in districts that have an agriculture education program," Lauffer wrote.

In other parts of the letter, Lauffer specified the lack of attention by the board.

"As I review the Feb. 27 revisions to Chapter 5 (regulations), I now see under elementary level education that the 'shall be taught' catagory has expanded from three areas to eight specific areas, yet there is still no mention of agricultural literacy or awareness.

"The (inferred) message from the State Board . . . either agriculture is misunderstood or it is not important enough to include.

"In middle level education, I see the general category of career education followed by the specific inclusion of 'technology education' and 'home economics.'

"Is the State Board implying that technology education and home economics, worthy as they may be in their own right, are more important than agriculture education? I hope not.

"Finally, under the high school education section, I see listed in the 'shall be made available category' vocational-technical education followed by the specific inclusion of business education, foreign languages, and family life education (formerly home economics). This is where we and others have been requesting the inclusion of agriculture and agricscience education."

Further in the letter, Lauffer said, "I submit to you that what we are experiencing is not a consistent desire on the part of the State Board to refrain from additional mandated specificity in the revised regulations, but rather, selective mandating of specific areas by the Board."

"If you don't understand the essence of agricultural education, please make an honest effort to listen to what we and these other groups have been saying to you. If you are choosing to ignore agriculture and agricultural education in this state, you are making a grave mistake."

actions has severely reduced or, in some cases, essentially halted many research programs of long-term value to the agriculture industry," he said.

Howes told Lancaster Farming that some of the research money could have contributed to finding solutions for possible nutrient management issues affecting many farms.

"We are willing to bear a fair and uniform share of budget cuts," Howes told the committee. "We do, however, object to being forced to accept a drastic 57 percent reduction as a short-term 'politically painless' solution when it will have a long-term negative impact on our industry."

Regs leave open

In addition, Dwight Frymyer, Juniata dairy farmer, is concerned about the current proposed legislation bound up with H.B. 496. The regulations in the bill leave "wide open for interpretation such phrases as 'time and manner in which nutrients are to be applied,'" said Frymyer. "Also, each operation is different, and to successfully address each management system with regulations would seem to be, at best, difficult."

Frymyer said that the present version of the bill "leaves open the possibility of other than nitrogen-based plannning."

Basing a bill on nitrogen-based planning, rather than phosphorous-based (as in the current version of the bill), is key to keep famers from potentially being put out of business, according to Frymyer.

"Farmers also feel that the regulations should be drawn to address only the high-density, high-risk operations, and exempt completely farms that pose little risk," he said.

Credit more costly

Jay Rush, chief executive officer of York Farm Credit, emphasized the fact that credit "will become more costly and more restrictive to agricultural producers in direct proportion to the level of perceived risk.

"Our concern is that improperly legislated practices will require excessive expense for agriculture," said Rush. "If this continues or becomes a more significant issue, it will . . . make much of the current commercial agricultural financing an unacceptable lending practice for many of the ag lenders in Pennsylvania for the future."

Ken Rutt, Lancaster County dairy farmer, emphasized the need for legislators to consider the fact that farms "have surved and prospered because they continue to be efficient and competitive," he said. "our economic strategies must support and encourage farming, not discourage farming."

Approximately 33 people representing an array of agribusiness industries and area farmers met with representatives of the Senate committee. Members present included Sen. Noah Wenger (R-Stevens), Sen. Roger A. Madigan (R-Towanda), Sen. John E. Peterson (R-Pleasantville), Sen James J. Rhoades (R-Mahanoy City), and Patrick J. Stapleton (D-Indiana).

Eastern Reports Profits, Approves Budget

RUTLAND, Vt. — Despite a lingering recession that hit the co-op's subsidiaries with lower sales, Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative should end the fiscal year March 31 with about $200,000 in profits, officials told some 200 farmers at the co-op's first-ever delegate meeting held in Vermont.

"We are one of the major organizations operating in Vermont today," Eastern General Manager Michael Donovan told delegates meeting in Rutland. He said the co-op's presence in the Green Mountain State has been growing since the early 1980s through mergers and an agreement to supply milk to International Cheese in Hinesburg.

Eastern has 3,100 member farms in nine states, with the largest concentrations in Pennsylvania, New York and Vermont.

Headquartered in Syracuse, N.Y., the co-op has offices in Montpelier, Vt. and operates a milk receiving station at Hinesburg, Vt.

Eastern also has a food and farm supply subsidiary based in Canton, Pa.; a dairy and environmental testing laboratory in South Waverly, Pa., and a video communications division in Syracuse, N.Y.

Vermont Agriculture Commissioner George Dunsmore welcomed the delegates, some of who came from as far as Delaware and Maryland. He said that agriculture, especially cooperative farming, was vital to the Northeast economy.

He disagreed with a newspaper columnist who suggested that agriculture was not very important anymore.

"I think Vermont's economy will be in trouble if agriculture fails," he said.

Commissioner Dunsmore also congratulated Eastern for being a leader in the recent farmer-sponsored food airlift to Moscow and in having an impact on the U.S. government's decision to send surplus dairy products to the former Soviet Union and other Eastern Bloc countries.

In other action:

• Eastern announced a major farm safety program, designed with the help of the New York Center for Agricultural Medicine and Health. The goal, Donovan said, is to reduce injuries and illness on member farms through a safety audit and a free safety kit including protective gear for the head, eyes, ears and lungs. Farmers who make safety improvements will receive $50 gift certificates.

• Delegates approved an operating and administrative budget of $204 million for the fiscal year starting April 1. That budget is based largely on the projected sales of 1.6 billion pounds of milk.

• Membership Audit Committee Chairman Kevin Barrett reported that membership currently stood at 3,136 farms, and that their equity investment in the co-op totaled $10.8 million.

• Membership Manager Anthony Schlesier reported the co-op recruited 160 new members in 1991.

• Delegates heard details of how Northeast co-ops organized a food airlift to Moscow schools and orphanages in less than two weeks. "This project falls into the category of self help," said Eastern President Lewis Gardner, who headed the farmer delegation to Russia as president of the Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency (RCMA). He said it was both a humanitarian project and an effort to put pressure on the U.S. Department of Agriculture to release surplus dairy products to keep U.S. farm prices from being depressed. "It's an example of pulling our resources to do something for us and to help others," Gardner said.

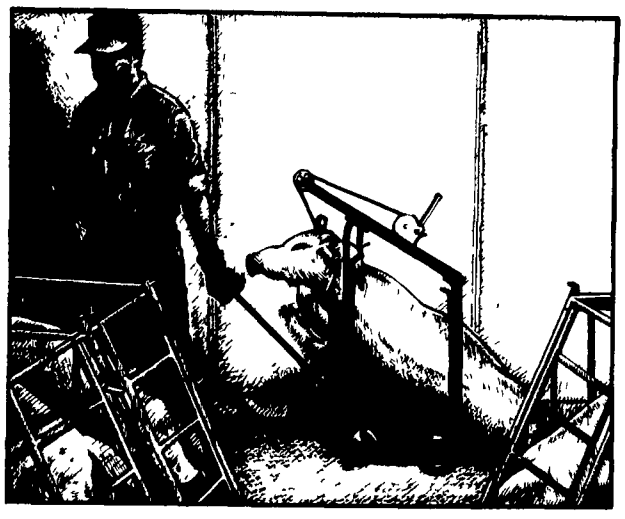
DEAD SOW REMOVAL BECOMES ONE MAN JOB



The Sow Hearse has an efficient, hand-operated winch connected to a steel cable and pulley that enables one person to pull a sow from the floor onto the cart to transport to a disposal.

Tri-County Confinement Systems of Lebanon has introduced the Sow Hearse to remove dead sows from confinement stalls in swine systems.

The death of a sow in a stall results in a very difficult and unpleasant job for at least two people. With a Sow Hearse, the task is much simpler and can be accomplished by one person.

The Sow Hearse, made of solid steel rod, is a rubber-wheeled cart designed to negotiate the narrow aisles of many confinement barns. On its top is an efficient, hand-operated winch connected to a steel cable that rides on a nylon pulley. When the cable is looped around the sow and secured, she can be pulled easily from the floor of her stall onto the sloped bed of the Sow Hearse. The machine then functions as a cart to transport the dead animal to a disposal location.

Dimensions of the Sow Hearse are 22" wide x 24" long x 4'4" high.

TRI-COUNTY Sow Hearse Makes The Removal Of A Dead Sow From A Confinement Stall An Easy Job For One Person. Made Of Solid Steel, It Is A Durable Easy-To-Operate Machine... A Must For Today's Confinement System Operator!

Bull Selection

opportunity to do both — it promotes the individual bull, but also the whole herd or breeding program at the same time. And so he's a partner in this promotion."

Evaluate herd

But first, it's up to the buyer to evaluate their herd and to determine what the needs are.

According to Lowell Wilson, Penn State professor of dairy and animal science, the EPDs are crucial. (An EPD list for a bull includes birthweight, weaning weight, yearling weight, maternal score, and milking capability). "Both index and EPDs are important in selecting the right bull because they describe both the genetic potential of a young bull based on his pedigree and his actual performance record," said Wilson.

For farmers who want to improve traits in their herd, the reproductive EPD records available at the sale may help. But for farmers who want simply to strengthen the herd in many areas can look for "balanced trait bulls," said John Comerford, Penn State beef specialist.

"This represents bulls in the middle of the road," said Comerford. "These bulls have EPDs that are not extreme, but can contribute to a herd in many traits of economic importance."

All elements

The EPDs take into consideration "all the members of the breed across the country," said Comerford.

Erskine Cash, Penn State professor of dairy and animal science, said that bull buyers must be careful not to concentrate on "too much of a good thing," he said. "Selection for certain trains will affect other traits as well. For example, a high yearling weight EPD may create difficulties down the road because of higher birth weights."

Said Wilson, "You have to have the right recipe, so to speak, and come up with an animal that would have the right amount of the different ingredients to go into the selection process, where each of the different values balance."

Wilson said that bull buyers "have to analyze what their market is, then develop a product to fit that market."

Keep records

Comerford emphasized the vital importance of keeping good, documented herd records in making a decision of what types of bulls to buy.

Documented records can be obtained also using some of the information provided by Penn State. For those using computers, farm software such as FINPAC can help analyze needs.

Special resource management software, which will integrate the cost of maintaining a cow and analyzing all inputs, is undergoing tests, according to Comerford. It will be available for use by extension offices within a year.

This is a sample sheet detailing Angus information to be used at the bull sale at the Beef Expo. Buyers can use this indexing information to select the right bull to purchase.

But for now, according to Cash, commercial beef operations have to take into account all management procedures, including analyzing forages and balancing feed rations to help ensure a better calf crop. For those who want to sell bulls, creating a healthy package includes taking a good, long look at all management decisions, selection, feeding, health, and other factors.

EPDs ignored

Many producers, however, take EPDs for granted or ignore them completely. Using EPDs is relatively new in the bull buying business. "There's still a lot of people who think (EPDs) are some 'voodoo in the sky,'" said Eberly.

But EPDs have proven valuable to a wide array of commercial cow/calf operations, and operators would be wise to use them.

Eberly said farmers should not think "it's an impossible task" to keep records and use them. "Any attention to detail as far as records and applying that information will benefit the producer.

"We're not to the point where we can say this is solidly the answer for each and every farmer, because every situation is different," he said. "But anything farmers do can benefit them directly and economically."

Editor's note: The last article in the bull buyers series will examine purebred bull breeders who will be represented at the Performance-tested Bull Sale on March 27 at the Beef Expo.

Get A Better Stand With Ridomil®

In over 30 disease trials, stand density increased an average of 25% after applying Ridomil. The best protection from Pythium and Phytophthora for alfalfa is Ridomil applied after planting seed.

By controlling damping-off and root rot in your alfalfa crop, you'll get:

- More plants per acre
- Thick stands that shade out weed competition
- Better root systems for water and nutrient uptake
- Healthier seedlings

Newpher To Head Office For Farm Bureau

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Richard W. Newpher of Camp Hill has been appointed to serve as Executive Director of the Washington D.C. Office of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

American Farm Bureau is the nation's largest general farm organization, representing over 3.9 million members in all 50 states and Puerto Rico including 23,049 family members of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA).

Newpher, 45, has served for the past 13 years as administrative secretary of PFA. As Executive Director, he will direct American Farm Bureau's national legislative activities.

Newpher succeeds John Datt who is retiring following 41 years of service in Farm Bureau, Newpher began his career with PFA as a regional organization director. He has served as PFA's manager of governmental relations, director of commodities, local affairs and national governmental relations. He attended Clearfield Area Schools, the Pennsylvania State University, and the American Institute of Banking.

In announcing the appointment, American Farm Bureau president Dean Kleckner said, "Dick Newpher brings excellent management skills, a thorough knowledge of Farm Bureau and a good understanding of what it takes to conduct a successful legislative affairs program."

Newpher will assume his new position in April.

Direct Marketers Present Award

NEWARK, Del. — University of Delaware senior Paul F. Doherty won the John McDaniel Memorial Scholarship from the Delaware Pest Control Association.

The $1,000 scholarship is given to a graduating university senior with high academic performance who has majored in entomology.

As an undergraduate, Doherty served an internship at DuPont's Stein-Haskell Laboratory working with rice pests and experimental insecticides. He also completed an independent study with his advisor, Dr. Roland Roth, that involved taking a tree census of a university woodlot.

Doherty, a native of Bridgewater, Mass., plans to attend graduate school to study conservation biology.

Roadside Market Bill Passes House

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A Pennsylvania State Grange supported bill, which would protect roadside markets from local ordinances, recently passed the State House of Representatives.

"This legislation is coming at a critical time," said Grange Legislative Director Brenda Shambaugh. "The marketing season is fast approaching and a law like this is needed to protect farmers' livelihoods."

SB 166, sponsored by Sen. Edwin Holl, includes roadside markets in the protection of the Right to Farm Law. If this bill becomes law, protection from local nuisance ordinances and suits would be given to farmers who have roadside markets and produce 50 percent of the goods they sell at their markets.

"Without such legislation, farmers could be restricted from selling their goods at roadside markets and lose a large part of their income," Shambaugh said. "The Grange is very pleased that the House of Representatives realized the importance of this bill and gave their support to the state's number one industry - agriculture."

From here SB 166 will go to Gov. Casey for his signature into law.

The Grange represents 35,000 rural Pennsylvanians on issues such as health care, agriculture, education, and rural development.

USDA Biotech Committee Recharted

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary Edward Madigan announced today that the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Biotechnology Research Advisory Committee (ABRAC) has been re-chartered for two years and 15 members have been selected to serve on the committee.

The committee reviews research proposals and develops recommendations to USDA concerning the biosafety aspects of proposed research projects. The committee also provides policy advice to the secretary regarding agricultural biotechnology.

The 15 members chosen to serve on the committee represent a wealth of knowledge and expertise in biotechnology.

Committee members represent several disciplines, including ecology, veterinary science, entomology, forestry, plant science, microbiology, food science, law, public health and bioethics. Members are appointed to serve two-year terms.

The ABRAC members include: Dr. Anne R. Kapuscinski, associate professor, department of fisheries and wildlife, University of Minn.; James W. Lauderdale, director, senior scientist, The Upjohn Company, Kalamazoo, Mich.; Dr. Pamela G. Marrone, president, Entotech, Inc., Davis, Calif.; Dr. Ronald R. Sederoff, professor, department of forestry, North Carolina State University, Raleigh, N.C.; Dr. William M. Witt, director, division of veterinary services, Food and Drug Administration, Jefferson, Ariz.; Dr. Deborah K. Letourneau, associate professor, board of environmental studies, University of California, Santa Cruz, Calif.; Dr. David A. Andow, associate professor, faculty, department of entomology, University of Minnesota, St. Paul, Minn.; Dr. Anne M. Vidaver, professor and chair, department of plant pathology, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb.; Dr. Lee A. Bulla, professor and chair, department of molecular biology, college of agriculture, University of Wyoming, Laramie, Wyo.

Also, Dr. Walter A. Hill, professor, dean, and research director, school of agriculture and home economics, Tuskegee University, Tuskegee, AL; Dr. Robert T. Fraley, director of plant science technology, Monsanto Company, St. Louis, Mo.; Dr. Susan Harlander, associate professor, department of food science and nutrition, University of Minnesota, St. Paul, Minn.; Dr. Edward P. Bruggemann, staff scientist, National Audubon Society, Washington, DC; Dr. Stanley Pierce, law partner, Rivkin, Radler, Bayh, Hart and Kremer, Uniondale, N.Y.; A. David Kline, professor and dean, college of liberal arts and sciences, State University of New York, New Paltz.

Dr. Harry C. Mussman, USDA's acting assistant secretary for science and education, will formally welcome the members at the next ABRAC meeting on Mar. 11-13. The meeting begins at 9 a.m. at the Rosslyn Westpark Hotel, Georgetown Room, 1900 N. Fort Myer Drive, Arlington, Va. 22209. The public IS welcome.

N.Y. Grange Wants Moratorium

CORTLAND, N.Y. — The New York State Grange is calling for a moratorium on all state mandates and is urging the leaders of its more than 400 subordinate Grange units to "adopt" mandates for intensive review.

Both the moratorium and the adopt-a-mandate program were outlined during the Grange's recent Legislative Conference here.

"We really don't need any more mandates until there's a solid study of the ones that already exist," said Grange Master William Benson. "And under no circumstance should legislators pass along mandates to which no funds have been attached. Do that, and you just add to the problems we already have."

Benson said the Grange is calling for the moratorium recognizing that there may be a need for some emergency legislation.

"We would hope for some kind of check and balance to ensure that an emergency truly exists," he said.

The Grange, which has been characterized by Assembly Minority Leader Clarence Rappleyea as a leader in fight for legislative and mandate reform, has been campaigning for mandate relief for more than two years.

Special mandate review sessions have been held in dozens of communities across the state, and the organization has worked hard to help identify and weed out useless and debilitating legislation.

Several other special interest groups have since taken on the mandate issue as their own, but Benson said the Grange is more interested in good results than public relations points.

"We know what we've done in this area, and we know how long we've been doing it," Benson said. "What really matters is that we, all of us, get the job done."

Rappleyea, the keynote speaker at the Legislative Conference, took the opportunity to outline for Grangers the Assembly Republican Reform Agenda for 1992, which includes a call to revive citizen participation in government, for a reform of the legislature's "pork barrel" spending, and for reforms in health care, education, and budget policies.

"The Grange has been in the front lines of the battle for reform," he said. "It has helped spread the word across our state that we need to change the way our laws are made and the way our budget is balanced.

Other conference speakers included state Sen. Nancy Larraine Hoffman (D-Syracuse), a consistent voice for legislative reform; David LaPone, the superintendent of schools in St. Johnsville; and June O'Neill, director of the state Office of Rural Affairs.

Hoffmann, an eight-year legislator, detailed a number of reform-minded bills she's introduced.

"State government, in New York, is about as backwards as a democracy can be," said Hoffmann, who is calling for an itemized legislative budget, quarterly spending reports, the elimination of legislative "lulus," the end of all-night legislative sessions, and the revision of the state's open meetings law.

Get A Leg Up On Chain Saw Safety

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — According to Earl Stitt, applications instructor with Keystone Stihl Inc., the most common, hazardous situation encountered by chain saw operators is kickback.

Kickback occurs when the upper quarter of the bar nose contacts a solid object or is pinched. The action of the cutting force reaction of the chain causes a rotational force of the chain saw in the opposite direction of the chain movement. This may fling the bar in an uncontrolled arc mainly in the plane of the bar.

Under some cutting circumstances, the bar moves toward the operator. Severe or fatal injuries may result. Kickback can occur when the nose of the guide bar is pinched, when it contacts solid material in the wood, or when it is incorrectly used to begin a plunge cut or boring cut. Kickback may also occur during limbing.

Chain saw operators have several options to help reduce the risk of injury from kickback. For starters, they can use a chain saw that provides safety features against kickback. Stihl chain saws, for example, have the following safety features: quickstop inertia chain brake, low kickback chain, and reduced kickback bars.

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission Report on Chain Saw Related Accidents in 1989, more than half of chain saw related injuries occur in the upper leg, knee, and lower leg areas.

Protective gear can help guard you against severe or fatal injury. Stihl protective pants and chaps are made of a durable, water and oil resistant outer lining of Dupont Cordura™ nylon, covering nine full layers of sewn in, Engtex™ cut retardant material. Protective layers are flared in the thigh area to protect the groin and femoral artery.

When the moving chain makes contact with the material, the Engtex™ fibers rip apart, clogging the drive sprocket and stopping the chain in certain situations. The degree of protection varies depending on chain speed, saw power, design of the sprocket, and similar factors.

Once the protective pads are cut, they can't be sewn back together to be used again. Protective gear must be washed correctly to maintain its effectiveness.

Wall Between Grower, Processor Has To Come Down

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Steve Faulk remembers Friday a week ago as "just total havoc."

Faulk, assistant processing plant manager for Pennfield Corporation, said the problem began in the early morning hours, during third shift. Where normally the whole bird processing line would take about 140 birds per minute, the line started to slow . . . gradually to 100 birds per minute . . . and less. The plant, ready to perform cuts for a special sales project on the first shift, had to draw in additional personnel to handle the whole birds. By noon, the company had to render 22,000 pounds of birds and lost about 10 hours of production time.

The problem was broiler leukosis ("poultry leukemia," with symptoms including lesions and tumors on the skin and internal organs) and dirty birds obtained from a growout. USDA inspectors ordered Pennfield to destroy many of the birds with the problems, costing the company time and money — a situation Faulk believes could have been avoided.

To avoid similar pratfalls in the future, Faulk said Pennfield has begun to "make a commitment to reach out to the growout area more and keep informed, keep them informed," and have growers visit the plant to see how Pennfield deals with problems. To do so, communication is the key.

Wall removed

Faulk, speaking at Monday's Poultry Management and Health Seminar, said the wall separating the growers and the processors must be removed and more communication has to take place.

"There seems to be a constant wall there," he said. "And just from sitting back here today and listening to some of the people talking and stuff like that, that wall's still there. That wall has to come down."

Faulk told the 32 representatives from area grower and processing plants that communication is necessary between the processing plant and growout, "back and forth," he said. "Not only when we have bad birds in there do we need to call and communicate with growout, but also when we have good birds in there. When we have the good birds in there, everything runs smoothly."

Steve Faulk, assistant processing plant manager for Pennfield Corporation, said the wall separating the growers and the processors must be removed and more communication has to take place.

Faulk said he has been just as guilty of keeping the wall up in the past as "everybody else before me. But to come up with a quality product out in the market, you as growers need to know what the problems are on which growers and so forth. And you also need and deserve to know when we have good birds in there also."

Prepare and plan

If growers have some difficulties, Faulk said Pennfield can prepare and plan for the problems. Because of a special leg quarters project (the sales department needed more than 700 boxes with a line of personnel working cutup), those personnel had to be moved, which helped fuel the day's "havoc."

Faulk said that Pennfield's mission statement is to "give the consumer the utmost quality product at the most reasonable price." To do so, the company has invested heavily in automation, including bird processing machines.

The company relies a lot on the equipment, said Faulk. To maintain quality, they also keep a quality control staff to perform various tests "where we bring in outside birds from other plants and compare them to our process birds," he said. "We phone the customers, we even have our product evaluation . . . so (customers) can send back and tell us what kind of job we're doing.

"Eleven years ago, the first thing that was brought up to me and the word of the day was 'quality,'" said Faulk. "It's been that same word everyday for the last 11 years. It probably will be in the next 11 years also.

"It requires total dedication, total communication between the processing plant and growout," he said.

Dauphin Dairy Day

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — On Wednesday, March 11, from 9:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m., at the Upper Dauphin High School in Elizabethville, the Dauphin County Cooperative Extension Office and the Upper Dauphin Young Farmers will sponsor an educational program for anyone interested in dairy production.

The program will include Tom McCarty, Cumberland County Extension, discussing barnyard waste water management; Dr. Larry Samples, DVM, will present information on reproductive herd health management, and James Verga, Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, will discuss physiology of dairy cow reproductive tracts and proper timing of insemination.

There is no registration fee. Lunch will be available at the school cafeteria. For additional information contact Stan Weaver at (717) 362-3666 or Paul Craig at (717) 921-8803.

Why Not Advertise Milk's Benefits On Carton

GEORGE F. W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — Recently our dairy cooperative held a successful and well-attended annual meeting. More than a thousand dairy farmers and guests took part.

As usual, half-pint cartons of milk were on the tables for everyone to drink. These little containers prompted some reflection on my part.

First, the half-pints contained and were labeled at 8 ounces, as is correct.

However, at a meeting at the Cornell University DHIA Center everyone was served "half-pints" of milk, which contained 10 ounces instead of the accurate 8.

An inquiry put to the Cornell University dairy processing plant revealed that they have packaged milk this way intentionally for more than a year now. As a result, they have significantly increased their sales of milk and their income.

Back at our co-op meeting I thought: "Is this a way to increase milk sales in our area too? Our dairy farmers could certainly use a better income from more fluid milk sales. Perhaps they should write their co-ops and processing plants about this idea, or make a motion to that effect at the next meeting."

I continued my contemplation as I read the nutrition information label on the half-pint carton of whole milk. It indicated that the one-cup serving size contained 150 calories, 8 grams protein, 11 grams carbohydrate, 8 grams fat, and 125 milligrams sodium.

The label also listed the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances for protein (20 percent), vitamin A (4 percent), vitamin C (4 percent), thiamin (6 percent), riboflavin (25 percent), vitamin D (25 percent), calcium (30 percent), iron (O percent) and niacin (O percent).

One who has some knowledge of nutrition understands this label to say that drinking 1 cup of milk per day gives a person all those percentages of what is needed for a healthy diet.

If one's nutritional knowledge is limited, however, then how do we know how nutritionally good that cup of milk is?

What you do not get from the milk carton is the message that no other food offers as much calcium — a most important daily nutrient.

Of course, protein, fat, carbohydrate, calories, sodium contents are important, but milk is not a unique food source for these. However, no other food provides as much calcium as a cup of milk, especially skim milk.

Why, then, is such an important message not prominently listed on the package under nutrition information?

Even the amounts of protein, fat, carbohydrate, calories and sodium are hard to understand. They are listed in grams per 8-ounce cup rather than in percentages. And percentages is how dairy farmers are paid for milk production, whether they ship 3.5 percent milk or 3.3 percent or 3.7 percent, not by what is in 8 ounces.

Are dairy farmers and processors hiding one of milk's greatest assets — calcium?

Literature is filled with evidence of its importance, and the National Dairy Council has plenty of promotional pieces on the subject. But why not print this information where it will do the most good, directly on the milk carton, where consumers will see it as they contemplate their purchases?

Consumers know that calcium is important for healthy bones and teeth and to prevent brittle bones in old-age.

What many don't know is that each day everyone needs at least 800 milligrams (0.8 gram) of calcium. Breast-feeding mothers require even more, at least 1,200 to 1,500 milligrams.

Nothing on the milk-carton label helps consumers count how many cups of milk are needed each day to come up to 800, or 1,200 or 1,500 milligrams!

What if someone doesn't like to drink milk? One cup of plain yogurt contains the calcium equivalent to one cup of skim milk; or ½ cup of ricotta; or 1½ ounces of swiss cheese; or 2 ounces of cheddar cheese; or 1 ounce of parmesan cheese.

Cottage cheese, cream cheese and blue cheese are not good substitutes; they are low in calcium.

Non-dairy alternatives to fulfill calcium needs are 14 ounces of canned sardines with bones; 2 cups of canned salmon with bones; 3½ pounds of broccoli; or mustard greens; and 10 tablespoons of blackstrap molasses.

Some people take calcium tablets, but calcium from this source may not be absorbed well.

Calcium is not only critically important for bone and teeth health, it's needed just as much for muscle contraction (athletes, pay attention!) and nerve transmission.

Recent medical research also shows that a calcium-rich diet can prevent and reverse colon cancer, even in people with a history of cancer. A calcium-rich diet can also lower high blood pressure.

In an Oregon study, hypertensive men and women, after eight weeks of 1,000 milligrams calcium daily in 3½ glasses of milk, showed significantly lower blood pressures without using medication.

It's clear that milk and dairy products are an asset to human health and nutrition, principally because of the calcium content.

Shouldn't dairy farmers get this message on each carton, bottle and jug of milk, and on the packaging of yogurt, cheese and ice cream?

It makes good business sense for the dairy farmer and good health sense for the consumer.

Salmonella Prevention Encouraged

hen houses. Eggs will not be tested if the environment is SE free. If environmental samples are positive, a 1,000-nest run of eggs will be tested. If eggs are positive, they would be diverted for pasteurization instead of eradicating the flock.

In the preventive program, samples will be collected by licensed technicians and cultures for SE will be done at state and federal labs.

Control methods for the preventive program include surveillance, biosecurity measures, rodent control, cleaning, and disinfecting between yolks.

Because rodents are believed to be a prime carrier of SE, it is important that steps be taken to eradicate the pests.

Rodent Control

Dr. Maxcy Nolan of the University of Georgia said that it isn't unusual to find 500 or more rats in a poultry operation. He pointed out several ways that producers can locate, identify, and erradicate rodent problems. Because rats seldom travel more than 15 feet from homebase, they can be tracked by locating their droppings and by noticing tracks left in dust or in flour sprinkled over an area. By focusing on specific areas, rodents can be more quickly eradicated.

"Rodents," he said, "would rather live in walls than any other place. They also would rather eat chicken feed than bait. To eradicate them, you must know where to put bait and switch compound."

Cleaning, Disinfecting

Dr. Sherrill Davison of the University of Pennsylvania reported on the disinfectants that are available on the market. Although formaldehyde seems to be effective, Davison predicts that it will be taken off the market because of the side effects.

Depending on the type of water used, disinfectants react differently. Studies show that water hardness, pH levels, and organic residue influences the effectiveness of disinfectants. While some farmers use pond or river water for cleaning, the usefulness of the disinfectant may be diminished. Well water has the best results overall.

To rid chicken houses of SE, hot water is much more effective but few farmers use it because of the expense. Davison suggested that hot water be used at least for the last wash. She also recommended putting lime on pits and using a cholorine solution on egg belts to kill the SE virus.

Davison said that some poultry producers have eradicated SE by heating empty chicken houses with grain dryers. Because temperatures reach 160 to 180 degrees, insurance companies do not cover the building if something happens during the process she warned producers.

Of 30 broiler houses cultured for SE after cleaning, records concluded that dry cleaning with a complete wash down works best to eradicate SE. Dry cleaning and the use of formaldehyde was second best.

Dr. Irvin Peterson of the USDA reported on several studies that showed the effectiveness of vaccinating with the SE virus. Peterson said, "If I was an egg producer, I would check the environment regularly, and I would vaccinate as soon as possible."

Those who would like more information on Salmonella enteritidis may call the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation (717) 652-7530.

About 175 people attended the Salmonella Enteritidis meeting held for poultry producers on March 10 at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

W.V. SCS Completes Flood Studies

MORGANTOWN, W.V. — The Soil Conservation Service (SCS) has completed its fifth, sixth and seventh West Virginia flood plain management studies, reporting on two sections of Berkeley County near Martinsburg and Warm Springs Run in Morgan County.

State Conservationist Rollin N. Swank said the Berkeley County studies were published in one report in 1991.

The town of Berkeley Springs printed the Warm Springs study which SCS finished this year, and it was introduced to the public at a meeting March 3 at the courthouse.

The first two SCS studies were done for rapidly developing areas of Raleigh County in 1985. The third and fourth were published together in 1987 for two streams at Ranson and one near Charles Town, both in Jefferson County.

The study areas in the 1991 report are Inwood and the Industrial Park near Martinsburg. Like Berkeley County as a whole, they face development pressures. The studies show on aerial maps where a 100-year storm will cause flooding.

York/Adams Farmers To Be Dropped From Bay Program

DAVID KANN, JR.
York Co. Conservation District

YORK (York Co.) — After October, Conewago and Marsh Creek watershed farmers in York and Adams Counties will no longer be eligible to apply for the Chesapeake Bay assistance program.

The program is a financial assistance opportunity for farmers who want to implement conservation and nutrient management alternatives; all in an effort to improve water quality. Ten watersheds all together are slated for removal from the program.

"Without the Bay Programs assistance, I would not have been able to pay for my barnlot project and field practices," said Gerald Stermer, a beef and grain farmer in Washington township. "There is still a good bit of work to be done within the watershed, that will not be done, if assistance is not available," said Stermer. The Stermers learned about the program from the local newspaper. "Our feelings were we wouldn't want to have to stand in knee deep mud and manure, well neither do the cattle. We decided to do something," said Gerald's wife, Norma Jean.

In the 1970s, Congress directed the Environmental Protection Agency to study the deterioration of life in the Bay. EPA's findings produced the Chesapeake Bay Agreement, signed in 1983 by leaders of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Last year the Department of Environmental Resources along with the State Conservation Commission came out with a study, based on a computer model. The analysis measured water quality problems within each watershed. The computer model took into consideration land use, soil type and soil losses, animal density, and average rain fall. But it did not take into consideration on-site evaluations or actual watertesting data. "The Commission doesn't think there are enough run-off nutrient problems to justify still making available, cost assistance funds," said Mark Flaharty, York County's CBP Coordinator.

"What's good for the Chesapeake Bay is good for Pennsylvania," said Governor Robert P. Casey of Pennsylvania, at a recent farm tour in Lancaster County. Decisions coming out of Harrisburg in the past 6 months, make the message less clear.

The Susquehanna River drainage basin contains 40% of the cropland in the Bay's watershed and the world's most concentrated population of farm animals, according to Tom Horton, author of "Turning the Tide, Saving the Chesapeake Bay." Soil and manure run-off adds excess nutrients to the streams and rivers, which lead to the Bay. This over abundance of nutrients trigger a downward spiral of plants and animals competing for oxygen and sunlight.

Thomas Clowney, along with his son Bob, own and operate the Lagging Stream Farm, southwest of Gettysburg. Tom says, they had some nutrient management problems before they got in the program. "I knew it wasn't quite right how we were managing our manure and I knew something had to be done," said Clowney. That something was a manure storage system and treatment lagoon, that will allow the Clowneys to spread manure at better times through the year.

"You are going to have the manure with animals, so you have to find the best use for it," said Clowney, The Clowneys have also implemented contour strips on their farm to help slow down the flow of rainwater. Before the contour strips were in place, Clowney said he could see rills developing in some of his fields. "This must be erosion, well we can't have it," said Clowney. "I want to turn the farm over to the next generation in better condition than I got it," Clowney stated.

While some steps, such as controlling manure and the upgrading of sewage treatment plants, have resulted in lower nitrogen and phosphorus levels in the Chesapeake, the work is far from over said county officials.

John Heller, a fifth generation dairy farmer and last year's State Clean Water Farm award winner from Aspers, says he has no regrets getting involved with the Bay Program. "It allowed me to gain some more ground and secondly, it helped me better manage my manure the 'clean way'," said Heller, when describing his manure storage which was cost shared through the Bay program. Heller said he could never get the full use from his dairy manure, but now he can. "By better managing manure, the farmer gets the best utilization of manure nutrients. Manure can take the place of costly commercial fertilizers which in turn means dollar savings for the farmer," said Brian Sneeringer, CBP-Nutrient Management Technician for Adams County.

There are many good aspects about the Chesapeake Bay Program, but after October many will miss out on the chance. Heller agrees, like many other farmers, "You will never, totally, get rid of the need."

If there are any interest or concerns for the program, call the York County Conservation District at 755-2966, or if you live in Adams, call the Adams County Conservation District at 334-0636.

For those farmers wanting to know more about the program, a meeting will be held on March 24th at 7:30 in conjunction with the Dover Young Farmers meeting. The meeting will be held at the Dover High School and will discuss the Bay program and Water Quality issues on the farm. One core pesticide credit will be available for those attending.

Brian Sneeringer, Bay Foundation, and Tom Clowney, Adams County dairy farmer, worked on a Bay Project assistance program.

Keep Tabs On Calf Health

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — It can be harder to raise healthy calves in the winter than in the summer, said an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Several physiological, environmental and management factors make a young calf's life more difficult in winter," said Dr. Larry Hutchinson, professor of veterinary science.

"Energy requirements for newborn calves are much higher in cold weather," Hutchinson said. "Also, many calf health problems are likely to be more severe during winter. Lice, mange mites and ringworm fungi all prosper in confined, damp environments and under conditions of poor nutrition."

The most common cause of sickness and death during a calf's first month of life is diarrhea, or scours. Several pathogens, including E. coli, Rotavirus, Coronavirus, Salmonella and cryptosporidia cause diarrhea in calves.

"These agents can be present year round," Hutchinson said. "But when calves are crowded, stressed by the cold and experiencing inadequate nutrition and less frequent manure removal, scours can become a major health problem in the herd."

Pneumonia is another leading calf killer.

"Bacteria and viruses are the immediate cause of pneumonia, but the predisposing factors of dampness, toxic gases, drafts and chilling are even more significant," Hutchinson said. "These are all more prevalent in winter."

The fungus that causes ringworm grows more readily when there is little or no exposure to sunlight, when nutrition is poor and when a calf's haircoat is long. This fungus also can live on building walls that are damp and poorly sanitized.

"Lice and mange mites also are a common problem in winter," Hutchinson said. "Their life cycle, which is completed entirely on the host animal, is fostered by conditions of close confinement and long haircoats."

Usual management procedures may work very well most of the year, but may not be good enough to maintain healthy calves in winter. Hutchinson offers a few tips to keep your calves healthy during cold months.

"Keep gestating cows in adequate, but not fat, condition," he said. "Make sure they get sufficient amounts of vitamins A, D and E, which are more likely to be in short supply in winter. Vaccinating cows in late pregnancy will ensure that specific antibodies against common diseases will pass into the colostrum."

Check with your veterinarian on which vaccine to use.

At calving time, make sure cows have an area that is disinfected, clean, dry and well-bedded with long-fiber bedding.

When a calf is born in winter, it's particularly important to ensure early, adequate intake of high quality colostrum. "For Holstein calves, that means ingesting three quarts of colostrum within a half hour after birth," Hutchinson said.

"Nipple-bottle or esophageal feeders are the most reliable ways to make sure the calf gets the colostrum it needs."

High quality feed also is vital in winter to avoid diseases. "Feed whole milk, sour colostrum and water at a 3 to 1 ratio, or a high quality milk replacer," Hutchinson said. "In winter, it's best to use a milk replacer with 15 to 20 percent fat."

If possible, keep young calves away from older animals to avoid the transfer of disease. Maintain adequate ventilation to keep moisture down and make sure bedding is always dry.

Management Information For Barn Use

How Does Your Herd Compare?

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — This data is pulled from Pennsylvania DHIA's mainframe computer each week. It is a one-week summary representing approximately one-fourth of the herds on test, as they are tested monthly.

These data are valuable from a business management standpoint and can be used for comparing your operations to the averages from almost 1,400 herds across the state.

DHIA Averages for all herds processed between 2/22/92 and 2/29/92

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's this week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania. Remember these are averages so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Barley Withdraws Support Of Nutrient Management Bill

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Rep. John Barley, R-Conestoga, was one of the few if not the only dissenter during a public hearing last year on House Bill 496, better known as proposed nutrient management legislation.

Recently, Barley went a step further and, opposite to his stance as a main proponent of nutrient management, announced his withdrawl of support for H.B. 496.

Because of his opposition during the public hearing last year Barley was criticized by Harrisburg pundits. Criticism of Barley had not been surprising, according to others who testified support of the legislation on behalf of agricultural organizations.

Instead, Barley said his opposition is based on the specific wording of H.B. 496. He said his main complaint with the bill is its wording and lack of cooperation from other legislators and an apparent lack of scrutiny by those who represent agricultural interests.

The wording in the bill addresses agricultural nutrients, that is, production animal manure.

It is fact that the legislation only clearly defines control of one non-point source pollution — production animal waste.

The bill does not technically address any other form of nutrient applications, such as those performed at country clubs, public golf courses, residential areas, on-lot sewage, etc.

According to Barley, the bill pinpoints agriculture as the scapegoat in the political effort to reach a reduction in nutrients to the Chesapeake Bay before the year 2000.

Last week Gov. Robert Casey met with Maryland Gov. William Scheafer to discuss nutrient management and the progress in fulfilling a commitment for a specific percentage reduction in nutrient pollution, to which Casey agreed.

According to Barley, and others who attended, the message of that meeting was that Pennsylvania is basing is reduction on phosphorus pollution, something which several reports have claimed is not the problem at all, but that the problem is nitrogen.

Pennsylvania has banned all phosphate-containing detergents from being used or sold in the state to help with that problem. However, studies from Penn State University declared that phosphorus pollution was not a major factor at all.

Pulling support from the bill seems suprising since Barley had authored his own variation of nutrient management, which was merged with a simulateous bill sponsored by Rep. Jeffrey Coy, R-Shippensburg.

The merged bill became H.B. 496. Barley said last week that he had a gentleman's agreement with Coy that the two would sit down and iron out disagreements about the purpose of the bill and the methodology of enforcing the intent of that bill.

That never happened, according to Barley.

He said he was snuffed out from being involved in closed door deliberations about the legislation.

Barley, a four-term representative, from Conestoga, said the bill, as it stands, would mean a great negative impact on the agricultural community, to the extent of being unfair and onerous and perhaps putting small operators out of business.

He said that his opposition is also based on the fact that this legislation almost singly targets agriculture while ignoring the logical fact that there is more nutrient-laden waste from humans, and perhaps wildlife, being emptied into the Susquehanna Watershed than is being contributed by average production agriculture operations.

The bill does include wording that DER would have to study and recommend potential problems and solutions from on-lot septic systems and storm sewers. But it doesn't mandate any controls or involve those operations in its seemingly conclusive focus that agriculture is the main culprit in Chesapeake Bay degredation.

However, Barley said he acknowledges that some agricultural operations must come up to snuff with the rest of agriculture because they give the rest of agriculture a bad image.

Mostly, Barley said he wants people to look at this bill closely and consider whether it is a bill which address nutrient management, or whether it is a bill which targets agriculture in a prejudiced way.

"I do really dissect this line-by-line and fully understand what they're trying to say.

"Having the opportunity with serving groups of people, some plain (meaning religious factions), they're not going to be very vocal. But they are concerned. They feel there is language in this bill that can have broad ramifications.

"Technically, I'm a co-sponsor (of the bill), but I have withdrawn sponsorship," Barley said. He said it should be relfected in an upcoming printing of the bill which is to reflect all changes made to it before it goes for further consideration.

Currently the bill is in the state Senate Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee, where it is being scrutinized.

Another beef of Barley's is that he said there was a gentleman's agreement between he and Rep. Coy. The agreement was that the two would get together in an effort to work out some of their differences about nutrient management before a hybrid bill would emerge.

Barley charges Coy with reneging on the handshake agreement.

"In my oppinion it was a breach of professional courtesy," Barley said. "Unfortunately, that was not a contract."

He said his major opposition to the wording of the bill deals with the wording in the bill which does give DER ultimate control of the application of manure.

However, Barley said he wants people to understand that production animal manure is not the only, and very well may not be, the major source of nutrient contamination into the Susquehanna Watershed.

The impetus for the bill was a result of the degredation of the Chesapeake Bay over the past 20 or so years to the point that there has been created a bottom area that can not support forms of life dependent on oxygen. In effect, it has become a sludge pool.

The specifics of the bill, which Barley is attempting to bring attention to, are several. The gist is that Barley wants the bill to reflect controlling of all nutrients applied in Pennsylvania, not just agriculture. And he wants more input from the agricultural industry into the enforcement of the law.

While that may seem as though the fox would be in charge of the hen house, Barley said those who would comprise an advisory board under the current legislative outlines, are not reflective of those who would be regulated.

State DHIA Convention

The opposing discussions centered on the belief that State DHIA already provides good service and if given time can provide any additional reports members want. Because of the authority and responsibility to maintain certified records, those who hold this view believe they are justified to refuse to allow members to transfer outside of Pennsylvania DHIA except under specific circumstances defined under national operating agreements between states.

A third undercurrent opinion also seemed to polarize at the annual meeting: Pennsylvania pride. This may even be tied to Penn State pride. This expressed itself in the idea that since Pennsylvania is the fourth largest dairy state, Pennsylvania DHIA should be the leader, with the ability to be all things to all people. Pennsylvania is great enough that it should be the bellweather DHIA of the region, maybe the nation.

As of this annual meeting, the underlying different views with the inherent power of local member unity on one side, and the power of exclusivity placed with the state organization by National DHIA has the various sides frustrated and looking for recourse.

At least it can be said that the forced cooperation between the sides has not left much creative energy available to find a common goal that will be needed to bring the sides back to together. Although the strong desire among members to find this goal and unify the organization also has grown.

MEANWHILE BACK AT THE RANCH

The keynote speaker on the Friday morning program told humorous stories. But Morris Jones did get serious too. He said that in spite of all the adversity in the dairy industry, somewhere there is a rainbow, the birds are singing, and young dairymen are going to make it.

"We don't learn much in good times," Jones said. "But in bad times we can buckle down and learn. The darkest part of the night is right before daylight. Tough times don't last forever, but tough people do.

"Tough times are like a grind stone: they either grind you down, or polish you. It depends on what you are made of. It depends on your state of mind. You can look on the bad side or on the good side.

"We came into this world without our permission," Jones said. "And we go out against our will. But the time between these two events is ours to live as we choose. God gave us two ends: one to sit on and one to think with. What you get done in life depends primarily on which end you use most. Heads you win. Tails you lose."

President Bill Itle reported that the DHIA computer was placed in the lab building for convenience. This caused some adminstrative people to move to the Agway annex on College Avenue.

He said committees report to the board on policy, budget and goals. Then the board makes the decisions that are carried out by management and staff.

Itle reported that a pilot member billing plan in Mifflin County lists every available DHIA service option on the invoice. In the future, members in every county that use this billing system will know what services DHIA has. He said the billing invoice list of services was a low-cost way to inform members of the available services.

General Manager Dick Barth reported that the financial statement showed a positive margin for the fiscal year at $61,670.56 with total cash position at $435,506.78. This report was for the year ending September 30, 1991.

For the calendar year ending in December, Barth said the association had 6,002 herds on test that included 339,760 cows. While the number of cows decreased from the previous year, the cows on test represented over 50 percent of the state dairy herd. This was the first year enrollment exceeded 50 percent of Pennsylvania's cows. This happened because the state herd decreased faster than the enrollment of cows in DHIA members' herds.

The newest management form offered by the state association was unveiled at the convention, an individual cow page that summarizes testday and current lactation information, as well as previous lactations. In addition, individual pedigree and reproductive management information is included. The new forms are to begin going out on March 16.

These young people provided several humorous skits about the necessity to use dairy products. They are from left, front, Kelly Geisinger, Berks County dairy princess; Karlene Weaver, Lebanon County alternate dairy princess and Allison Martin, Lebanon County dairy maid. Back, Ana Delgadillo, visitor from Mexico; Nichele Dorman, DHIA staff; Karen Lentz, Lebanon County dairy princess, and Penny Jordan, York County dairy princess.

Barth said the heifer management and the PRIME programs continued to grow. In addition, the lab processed 334,000 cow records and 276,000 samples. Less than one sample per thousand was untestable, and Barth said this low rate was a tribute to the way the samples were handled and transported on the state DHIA truck system.

At the fourth annual awards banquet, held for the first time out of State College, a number of herd management awards were presented. They are as follows: AYRSHIRES: 1, Charles & Don Gable, Chester Co.; 2, Ridge View Farm, Clinton Co.; 3, Dean Varner, Huntingdon Co.

BROWN SWISS: 1, Jerry Krone, York Co.; 2, Swamp Creek Swiss, Somerset Co.; 3, Donald Trimble, Lancaster Co.

GOATS: Susan Meas, Bradford County; 2, Little Rockspring, Montgomery Co.; 3, Susan Shields, Indiana Co.

GUERNSEY: 1, Trotacre Farm, Lawrence Co.; 2, Robert Smith & Son, Bedford Co.; 3, Jerry Krone, York Co.

JERSEY: 1, Ironwood Dairy Farm, Erie Co.; 2, Windy Hill Farm, Mercer Co.; 3, Ken Weaver, Clarion Co.

MIXED BREEDS: 1 Milton Vail, Wayne Co.; 2, Frank James, Somerset Co.; 3, L & L Farm #1, Berks Co.

The high herd in milk, the most improved herd in fat and the most improved herd in protein is owned by Milos & Sandy Sinan, Indiana Co.

The lowest SCC herd is owned by James Slocum, Wayne Co.

Retiring board members recognized for years of service include: Nelson Stoltzfus, 10 years; John Foster, 3 years; Robert Koker, 3 years; Stanley Brubaker, 9 years; Robert Kendig, 15 years and Bill Itle, 6 years.

The board of directors as of April, 1992, are slated as follows:

Wyoming/Lackawanna Holstein Members Hold Meeting

RONALD CLARK
Susquehanna Co. Correspondent

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — The annual meeting of the Wyoming/Lackawanna Holstein Association was recently held at the United Methodist Church. A dinner was served by the United Methodist Women. Following the dinner, the business meeting and an honors session were held.

The meeting was highlighted by the announcement of a Hall of Fame Award which will become an annual event of the Association. The first recipient of this honor is Clifford Sands, of Tunkhannock. For 23 years, Sands was a director of the Holstein Club, 14 years its secretary, and for five years served as president. He has been a director of the Pennsylvania State Holstein Association, and served twice as delegate to the National Convention. His name is engraved on a plaque which will be on display at the Wyoming County Extension Office. Another memento was a beautiful clock, handcrafted by one of the club members.

The Hall of Fame Award will be presented each year to a person who has made significant contributions and participated in many activities for the Holstein Association and the agricultural community. Selection will be made by a committee. This year's committee included Wayne Sherwood, Elwood White, and Foster Constable. In making the presentation, Mr. Sherwood announced that each member will, after his appointment, automatically become a member of the committee for the following year.

Murray Fisk, retired County Extension Agent, recounted Sand's county-wide activities throughout the many years. He was a director of the Tunkhannock Artificial Breeding Coop, which is now Sire Power; he served on the County Extension Committee for 20 years and was a member of the Wyoming County Planning Commission for 24 years. He has a long record as a member of the 4-H Advisory Committee, and still serves there. Lastly, his operating a large and successful farm was somehow dovetailed into his time and effort to public projects.

Congratulatory remarks were also made by neighbors and friends, who cited the support and cooperation of Mrs. Sands. In his response, Sands gave full credit to his wife, Pauline. He introduced his son, Tom, and Tom's family to the gathering.

The warm congratulations of the Holstein Association, as well as his friends and neighbors, were expressed by everyone present.

In other business, the nominating committee reported the nomination of Dale Shupp, Roger Sherwood, and George Shapuk to succeed themselves as directors. Election was by acclamation. Roger Sherwood serves as president of the group.

Kenneth Rainey, Director of Membership of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, reported on the fiscal year ending in September, 1991. He said that the Association was in a favorable financial position, and related that successful exports of cattle and embryos to overseas countries had contributed to the fiscal welfare. He encouraged the members to be alert for continued sales, especially to the Middle East, as he predicted that a minimum of 1,000 head of registered heifers would be needed for export. He urged the farmers to register all heifers, as those which might be considered lower quality here would contribute to improvement in other countries.

The upcoming dispersal of the dairy herd of George Sheypuk of Lackawanna County will take place on March 14. Sheypuk has a large milking herd and many head of young stock. He has had a thriving business in producing frozen embryos for international trade.

Rainey also reminded that there will be a Spring Show on March 27 at the Farm Show Arena in Harrisburg. There will also be a sale at Penn State in April.

A new State Directory of Members is now being made available. Mr. Rainey also announced that Wilkes Barre has been chosen to host the State Convention next year. Frank Insigna, Secretary of the Wyoming/Lackawanna group will be the overall chairman of this event.

Robert P. Parr reported on the progress made thus far in organizing an Open Dairy Show to be a part of the Wyoming County Fair this fall. Planned for September 5, competition will be open to farmers from Wyoming, Bradford, Luzerne, Lackawanna and Susquehanna counties, and perhaps others as well. In addition to the Open Show, there will be a Junior Show open to young people from seven to 19 years of age. Work is in progress for the planning and construction of two barns, 30 by 60 feet each, and a 48 by 104 foot show ring.

4-H Youth Awards were presented by Dale Shupp. Trophies were given to one boy and one girl in each category. First year awards were made to Bobby Sue Adams and Robert Wilson; Junior Awards to Jenny Teel and David Shupp, with Senior Awards being presented to Charlene Shupp and John Maddox.

Dale Shupp also announced that Wyoming County Extension Director Robert Hobbes plans to retire at the end of June, 1992. In addition, plans are under way for the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the Wyoming County Extension Service. It is expected that this event will be held in November. Shupp is president of the County Extension Organization.

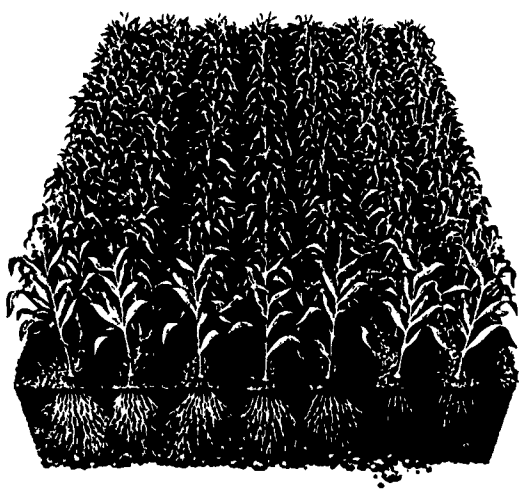
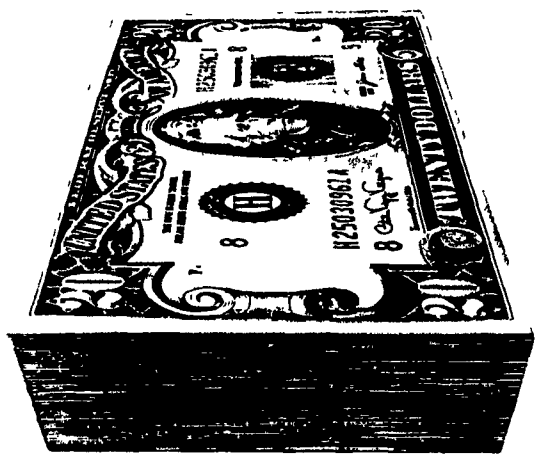
Sutazine gives you
the best of both worlds.

Grass control.



Cash control.



Your best buy in herbicides just got better. We've lowered the cost of SUTAZINE* herbicide. Now you get superior control of annual grasses and broadleaf weeds—and save $2* per acre compared to Bicep. Depending on your acreage, you can save hundreds of dollars.

SUTAZINE is an easy-to-use premix that doesn't need rain for activation. It mixes into your soil and moves laterally as a vapor—filling gaps to create a uniform weed barrier. You get exceptional control, even in dry weather.

Stop in now and get the best of both worlds: grass control and cash control. Always read and follow label directions carefully.

Lapp Open House Held

WHITE HORSE (Lancaster Co.)—The open house at Lapp's Barn Equipment featured slides and videos from Russian farms and a special advice on maintenance of equipment. Featured speaker was Dr. Gordon Schwemmer, representative from J-Star.

"Let's fix it before it's broken," Schwemmer said. "The preventive maintenance done daily, monthly or semi-annually is the effective way to prevent large repair bills and down- time in the busy season.

Schwemmer said the most important maintenance step is to grease all the moving parts and keep oil levels full on the gear boxes. Proper maintenance can cut down on the high expenses associated with repairs.

For example, on silo unloaders be sure the silage is properly distributed and make sure the unloader is raised to the top for filling. Also the proper cut length of stems and proper moisture are also important.

"General daily care is what you need to do," he said.

The three-day also featured a free lunch and large door prizes, including a first prize of $2,000 worth of Jamesway parts.

More than 400 persons attended the open house.

New Agreement For Animal Health

HARRISBURG (March 11) — Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff Wednesday announced that a new agreement between Pennsylvania State University, the University of Pennsylvania and the Department of Agriculture will provide better animal health diagnostic services to farmers.

Under the agreement, the two university laboratories, which are partially funded by the Pennsylvania Animal Health and Diagnostic Commission, and the Department's Summerdale laboratory will each provide complete diagnostic services, but will also specialize to avoid costly duplication.

Each laboratory brings to the system a unique capability based on its parent institution. In complex cases, lab technicians can consult with experts on the institution's staff.

Wolff, who chairs the Commission, said the three-lab system will offer more complete services to producers.

"Under this arrangement Penn State will specialize in virology while the University of Pennsylvania will specialize in toxicology and the Department's Summerdale laboratory will handle most regulatory testing," Wolff said.

"Each laboratory has unique capabilities, but under the supervision of the Animal Health Commission, testing can be referred between labs so that diagnostic services can be more complete."

Information on available testing and a new fee structure will be mailed to potential users later this month. In the meantime, questions concerning laboratory services should be directed to the individual laboratories or to the Animal Health and Diagnostic Commission Office in Harrisburg (717) 782-2852.

Cuts more than hay. Cuts time.

New Idea 5212 Disc Mower Conditioners cut a big 11'9" swath and condition with 9'6" intermeshing rolls...the widest disc mower conditioner available. You cut and condition lots of hay with each trip. And that means you cut time.

The 5212 is a wider version of our well-known 5209.

Because both the 5212 and 5209 use the New Idea modular disc cutterbar design, there's less downtime.

Routine maintenance is simple. And, although unlikely, repairs are a breeze, too.

Best of all, you'll find our disc mower conditioners are just one segment of our hay equipment line. Round balers, disc mowers, sickle mower conditioners, rakes and hay handling tools are all available through your White-New Idea dealer.

Penn State Extension Sheep Specialist

Speculating On Vaginal Prolapses In Sheep

It is interesting that we have been getting an increasing number of calls about vaginal prolapses in sheep. They jury is still out whether this problem is genetic or environmental, but some evidence points toward a potential environmental management problem.

Uncertain of the cause of this malady, however, we can only speculate on what action to take in preventing rather than treating it. Anybody who has experienced a prolapse problem will agree that an effective prevention effort should rank above any treatment process.

In most cases, treatment for a prolapsed condition is nothing more than a short-term salvage effort. Short of culling, no magical cure exists that will prevent the recurrence of a prolapse condition. Therefore, the best way to deal with a prolapse situation is to do our utmost to prevent it from ever occurring. You may disagree, but here are a few situations/conditions where there appears to be higher than normal incidence of prolapse.

Sheep With The No Tail Snydrome

The tail docking issue is one of considerable concern. Unfortunately it occurs most often with purebred sheep, which is not to imply it is a sheep breed or genetic problem.

That statement may be an oversimplification of the problem, but how do you evaluate situations where several thousand commercial ewes will lamb with a prolapse rate less than .05 percent and then observe purebred ewe flocks of less than 30 ewes with more than 20 percent having varying degrees of both rectal and vaginal prolapses during gestation and/or the birth process?

Many of these purebred sheep suffer from the no tail syndrome and we subsequently see a positive correlation to the prolapse condition. Frankly, docking shorter than the first vertebrae from the rump is too short. In support of this premise, considerable documentations shows an increased rate of rectal prolapses with both shortdocked feeder lambs and tailless feeder pigs managed under feedlot conditions.

Feeding Moldy/Dusty Feed During Late Gestation

Although it certainly may not be the sole factor, spoiled feed in combination with the no tail syndrome increases the chance for vaginal prolapse. A coughing ewe in late-gestation with a full uterus (twins plus) and an extra gut fill is another prime candidate for vaginal/rectal prolapse.

Likewise, we see higher than usual incidence of rectal prolapse in both lambs and pigs fed moldy/dusty feeds. Complete feeds for feeder lambs should be coarse ground and dust-free, perhaps another reason for considering pelleted feeds.

Over-Conditioned Ewes Going Into Late Gestation

The over-conditioned ewe/no exercise issue is perhaps more difficult to justify. However, many believe that any gestating farm animal should be kept on an exercise program. It may be nothing more then walking for feed and water.

Exercising mature ewes heavy with multi-birth seems to ward off certain lambing problems. Whether the result is increased muscle tone or overall thriftiness, an exercise component for gestating ewes may help minimize prolapse problems. The resistance to respiratory problems for a thrifty ewe also appears to be greater, especially where the lambing environment is a poorly ventilated shed and when the lambing schedule occurs in late-winter months.

Improper Feeding/Nutrition Of Late Gestating Ewes

The concern here is how much a ewe, heavy with lamb(s), can consume in a day. Naturally, she will attempt to satisfy her appetite, but for certain feeds such as ensilage we might have an over-filled/under-nourished ewe.

Likewise, using excessive amounts of high concentrate feeds can create an excessive gut fill during late gestation that may trigger a prolapse. These feed conditions in combination with spoiled feeds can only exacerbate the situation.

Failure To Cull A Prolapsed Ewe

You can write your justification for maintaining breeding stock with a prolapse history. Any available gimmicks you might acquire to prevent a reoccurrence are just that — gimmicks.

If you asked me to rank these five situations as causative factors, I would probably leave them as listed. However, your own experiences and predisposing circumstances may indicate a different ranking.

Identifying and applying preventative measures are key to minimizing the prolapse danger. As for treatment, you should have a good veterinarian on 24-hour call who likes treating sheep and has lots of patience.

This problem needs to be taken seriously. Preventative medicine is the only real answer if we wish not to be plagued with the problem in epidemic proportions.

Fed Farm Employee Regs Topic Of Meeting

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.) — Learning and applying state and federal regulations regarding farm employees will be the program for a meeting to be held Wednesday, April 1 at Thompson's Dairy Bar on Newton Ransom Boulevard near Clarks Summit.

Arranged by the Lackawanna County Cooperative Extension of Penn State University and the Pennsylvania Farmers Association, the program will include information important to employers of both full-time and seasonal farm labor.

New and proposed changes in legislation and regulations will be explained by speakers from Penn State University, Pennsylvania Farmers Association, Workmen's Compensation, Unemployment Compensation, and the U.S. Immigration Service.

Topics will include information on the Fair Labor Standards Act, Americans with Disabilities Act, vehicle insurance requirements, labor contractors, and the use of the "Penn State Farm Labor Handbook."

All employers of farm labor, regardless of the number of employees, are encouraged to attend the meeting.

Reservations of $10 can be made by mail to the Lackawanna County Cooperative Extension, 200 Adams Avenue, Scranton, PA 18503, (717) 963-6842 by Friday, March 27.

Lancaster Chamber Now Has Farmer Associate Member Program

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—To create a closer tie between the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and farmers, a new associate membership program has been initiated. This program is open to all farmers for a nominal fee of $35 yearly.

Chamber Farm Associates help present a voice for agriculture within the business and benefit from the advocacy efforts of the chamber's manager of agricultural services on governmental, regulatory and environmental issues.

In addition, a quarterly newsletter and direct invitations with reduced rates to programs and events sponsored by the chamber's ag committee are part of the package.

The chamber is not a government agency or a political organization but has 2,200 members, mostly small business persons who volunteer to help create a better business comunity.

The chamber acknowledges the importance of agriculture to its mission and has an active ag committee comprised of one-third farmers, one-third agri-leaders and one-third agri-business representatives. With the farmer associates program, the farm community can have an additional important presence in the Lancaster business community.

To become a Chamber Farm Associate, write a $35 check for a 12-month membership and send it to: Chamber Farm Associate, The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Box 1558, Lancaster, PA 17603-1558.

Hamilton Named Coordinator

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — George Hamilton has been appointed to coordinate the Penn State agronomy department's two-year turfgrass management program.

The certification program, which combines four eight-week sessions with a six-month professional internship, is oriented toward training golf course managers and other landscaping superintendents.

Hamilton, who has earned bachelor's and master's degrees in agronomy from Penn State, has taught a variety of turfgrass courses and has been in charge of development for the university's Landscape Management Research Center since 1982.

For information about the program, call (814) 865-8301, or write to the Short Course Office, 306 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802.

Pediatrician Says Dairy Products Benefit Health

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

FEASTERVILLE (Bucks Co.) — Adults can be severely misguided if they attempt to impose adult dietary parameters on children, according to a leading Harvard pediatric physician.

Dr. Ronald Kleinman, associate professor of pediatrics at Harvard Medical School, was one of three guest speakers Tuesday at the annual banquet and meeting of the Dairy Council Inc., held at the Buck Hotel and Convention Center in Feasterville.

Kleinman, who is also chairman of the Nutrition Committee of the American Academy of Pedicatrics, discussed heart disease, its links to cholesterol levels in adults and children, and current recommendations for testing of blood cholesterol.

"Any kind of guidlines for heart disease and cholesterol, especially for children, are going to change within the next 10 years," Kleinman said, adding that some of the current advise will remain, but much of what has been recommended about cholesterol and heart disease will be replaced by new advice.

According to Kleinman, there is a connection between cholesterol at childhood and saturated fats in diets and heart disease in adults. But taking the connection too far is not advisable, he said.

"It's a big leap between the diet for adults and the diet for children. The primary goal for children is to grow and develop normally," he said.

Parents who misguidedly restrict the types and amounts of fats in a child's diet to less than 30 percent of the calories run the risk of having their children develop nutritionally deficient.

He said blood cholesterol is an important determinant for heart disease. A 1-percent rise in blood cholesterol is about equal to a 2- to 3-percent rise in risk of hear disease.

However, simply using that information to make decisions about a child's diet is wrong, mainly because of the poor predictability as to whether a child with high amounts of low-density lipids (LDL, or bad cholesterol) carries that same problem into adulthood is poor.

"I'm not sure we can identify children who may have a problem as adults," he said, adding that that statement may seem at odds with recommendations he helped to form for the testing of children for cholesterol levels.

What has been shown is that the levels of total blood cholesterol in people changes greatly while maturing from birth to adulthood.

According to Kleinman no child under two years should have a fat-restricted diet, since they have large energy and nutritive requirements, which includes fats and fatty acids.

He said however, that at birth, a child's cholesterol level is about 74 milligrams cholesterol per decaliter of blood, while fat triglycerides average about 37 mg/dcl.

Those levels change rapidly at certain times in development, such as at the onset and immediately prior to puberty, with an average level ranging from 160 to 175 milligrams, taking into account the gender, ethnic, and racial differences in cholesterol levels.

What it means, he said, is that cholesterol levels change widely during a lifetime, especially during the formative years while growing up. Therefore, tests which may be high may very well be well down within a matter of months, because of the natural changes.

Also differences between boys and girls are such that LDL levels increase for boys, while the high density lipoprotein levels soar for girls.

The recommendations by the American Academy of Pediatrics which resulted from work by the nutrition committee which Kleinman chairs, take much of this uncertainty and inaccuracy in testing into account. Those recommendations are also supported by the National Institute of Health.

Kleinman said that cholesterol levels should be consistent with the flucuations, and any high test readings should be followed up with repeated tests to confirm abnormally high levels before any restrictions on fat should occur, other than trying to keep intake to about 30 percent, no more than 10 percent should be saturated fats.

There are children at risk, especially those who are obese, smoke cigarettes and lethargic. They run a higher risk of heart disease as an adult.

Genetic expression is also considered to be strong factor in cholesterol levels, he said.

Children whose parents are 55 or younger and have suffered heart disease are considered at higher risk for developing heart disease, he said. Those children and others, who are shown through accurate testing methods to be at risk are the ones who would need medically prescribed controls.

There are also children who may be included, depending on various factors and the decision of a pediatrician.

Kleinman said that cholesterol testing will probably change greatly within the next 10 years and may focus more on total fat compositions, or even triglycerides, to better indicate risk of heart disease.

Also, he said a study that followed people's blood cholesterol from childhood over the next 15 years. He said that only those whose blood cholesterol level was 170 milligrams per decaliter of blood and above were followed.

As it turned out only 32 percent ended up having elevated cholesterol levels as adults. He said that means 68 percent would have been mislabeled as children as having a high risk for heart disease.

He said that another study following the 90th percentile of children with elevated blood cholesterol, that is above 200 mg/dcl, resulted in 52 percent requiring intervention as adults, meaning changes in diet and lifestyle, while 48 percent were mislabled as being at risk.

Therefore selective testing is recommended.

"It seems to be a progressive process," Kleinman said of scaring of the blood vessel walls by the movement of fat through tissue.

He said that even if a child or young adult has a high blood cholesterol that only indicates a risk of developing high blood cholesterol as an adult, which is the risk for heart disease.

Also, high blood cholesterol in adults is nothing more than an indication of higher risk to heart disease, not a promise.

Therefore, Keinman said that to prevent the psychosocial problems of being labled as a high risk, growth inhibition, unecessary costs and possible adverse side effects of medicines, people shouldn't over-react to concern over dietary fat intake because it could be more damaging than a slight increase in cholesterol which may very well disapear with time.

On the left, Dr. Rondal Kleinman, a leading pediatrician, and Althea Zaneckosky, a media specialist, stand in front of the new Dairy Council Inc public dispay.

He said that as far as dairy products, they should be a part of a diet. He said he personally enjoys chocolate, which is high in fat and sugar, and that it doesn't have to be omitted from a diet.

"There is no such things as a bad food," he said, adding that all foods are good as long as the variety is wide and the intake of any one is not out of balance.

He also talked about balance as not necessarily occuring over a single 12-hour period, but over the course of several days.

Testing under the recommendations of the American Academy of Pediatrics would carry a national cost from $350 million to $370 million to start up and several hundred thousand a year after that.

The number of children who would be tested during the first year would be 14.5 million, which an annual testing of about a million children.

Children who are active, maintain a normal body weight, keep total fat consumption to about 30 percent of the total diet or no more than 300 millgrams cholesterol per day.

Not all saturated fats are harmful, also, he said. He specifically pointed out that Stearic Acid which is a fatty acid in chocolate and beef does not affect the blood cholesterol at all.

The recommendation by Kleinman was to eat lean meat, use low fat dairy products and to eat more fish; live a prudent life style and a prudent diet; etc.

He specifically said that there is no correlation between beef consumption and heart disease.

Basically, he said that studies have shown that American youth are eating close to the recommended levels of saturated fats and not as much total cholesterol as has been set as a daily maximum.

School lunches and breakfasts provide a significant amount of the daily nutrition for a large number of children. For some, he said as much as 40 percent to 60 percent of their daily caloric and other nutritive intake is through sources outside the home.

Kleinman said to be on the lookout for stories about a study which links low cholesterol in the diet to sociopathic (antisocial) behavior, although he said he didn't believe it.

Although he In other business, Jan Stanton, executive director of Dairy Council Inc., gave an update on the new directions of the council, and presented several awards including a 25-year award to Susan Snyder and a 5-year award to Brenda Ripley.

Stanton said that the council has reviewed and reworded its mission statement. In the process, she said that Dairy Council Inc., is giving up its "sacred cows."

Among those given up are obsolete corporat culture and policies; unquestioned industry standards; and daily personal ruts.

Stanton said that the mission statement came as a result of figuring out what the people want who are served by Dairy Council.

The came up with a second part to the mission statement which has been in effect for a year under a key leader concept and a constant update system, etc.

The mission statement reflects a desire by the council to "give us a reason to come in here every day."

According to Stanton, some employees have posted the mission statement on the wall over their desks so they can reference it constantly, especially when confronted with a decision.

She said it takes team effort to complete the mission and also the help of the customers of Dairy Council — the dairy producers, the dairy industry.

Also speaking was Althea Zanecosky, a media specialist for the Dairy Council who reported on some of her breakthroughs with the media to get the nutrition message across.

She showed clips from television news interviews and radio interviews which provided entertainment and accurate information, other than the information that has been presented time and time again.

She now is a regular guest on a radio show in the area and has worked with KYW-TV in Philadelphia.

The council also recently acquired a display for use at seminars and conventions that was set up at the back of the Buck Hotel meeting room.

Md. Certification Exam Set

WESTMINSTER, Md. — The Carroll County Extension Service will be sponsoring a private pesticide applicator certification exam on Friday, March 20, from 1-3 p.m. and again from 7-9 p.m. at the Carroll County Extension Service Office Building.

The exam is open to anyone who wishes to become certified to apply restricted use pesticides.

There will be a training session for the exam on Friday, March 13, from 1-3 p.m. and also from 7-9 p.m. at the Carroll County Extension Office Building. The training session is optional; however, the material on the exam will be covered during these sessions and it is recommended that you attend.

Stop by the extension office before the training session to pick up the study books and register for the exam. If you have any questions, call (410) 848-4611 or (410) 875-2801.

Talents Are For Sharing Mosemann Couple Say

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

JIM THORPE (Carbon Co.) — If you ever met Dan and Marian Mosemann, you probably tasted some of their homemade jellies, or their breads, or Dan's pot roast specialty. Or, you admired Marian's prize-winning quilting, learned her combination quilting-embroidery stitch, or became immersed in the couple's musical concerts.

The list could go on, but those who know the Mosemanns from Jim Thorpe, know them as a talented couple who are always eager to share their homemade specialties and skills with others.

"The Lord gave us talents to share them," Marian said.

And for that reason the couple give 300 to 400 jars of their homemade jelly to nursing homes, low-income families, neighbors and friends each year, and they offer free concerts and teaching seminars to churches and other organizations.

Cooking skills

These talents were cultivated when the Mosemanns were children. When he was a youngster, Dan Mosemann, a seventh generation descendant of Hans Herr and grandson of the former Mosemann's Peanut Butter Company in Lancaster, his mother told him, "Anyone who eats like you do should learn how to cook."

With that incentive, Dan soon became an accomplished cook. Now he said that he can actually taste a recipe just by reading the ingredients required. When he married Marian, skilled in Sicilian baking, the two combined their cooking skills.

The Mosemanns especially enjoy baking breads and making jellies.

"Whatever Dan picks, I turn into jelly," Marian said.

Among the common varieties are unusual flavors such as elderberry, chokeberry, persimmon, and Alaskan dew berries.

Many of those who taste the couple's cooking insist, "No one can make it better. It's the best I ever had."

Sewing skills

Marian's sewing skills were also honed as a child. Marian said that she learned her sewing skills from her Italian mother who sewed for the "rich people."

Today, Marian has won numerous awards for her quilts and for a satin wedding gown that she quilted for her daughter.

Marian has developed a unique technique that she calls quilt-embroidery, in which the quilting and embroidery is accomplished simultaneously. On an all-white satin quilt, this technique shows up beautifully. Her most recent prize-winning project, called the Unity Quilt, is dedicated to the men and women in the Armed Forces.

Marian said that she was inspired to design the quilt while listening to patriotic songs. She began working on the quilt when U.S. troops were sent to Saudi Arabia.

"The luxurious satin depicts the rich character of our people," Marian said of the quilt's symbolism. "A single color recognizes all races and ethnic backgrounds. The single piece of fabric indicates the unity of the states. The text and flag represent the symbols of our great country."

Marian said the quilt measures 45x54 inches. It took 55 hours to stencil it, 27¾ hours to quilt the stars, 25½ hours to quilt the lettering, 29¼ hours to quilt the stripes, and 78¼ hours to quilt the states.

Marian passes on her sewing skills by teaching quilting and other sewing classes such as French hand sewing and her special quilt-embroidery stitch. She has organized quilt shows for documentation because she believes that quilts are a legacy of our heritage. Quilts, she said, are sometimes the only document that are passed from generation to generation.

An example of family history passed on through a quilt is a quilt that came from Dan's family. The Philadelphia Cobblestone patterned quilt had been given to Dan's grandparents on their wedding day. Dan's grandfather, a bishop in the Mennonite Church believes the bright yellow and red colors were "too loud" for a bishop's family and the quilt was never used. Today the Mosemanns use it when they present Quilt Shows, narratives of quilt histories and quilting lessons.

Musical talents

Musical talents were also developed during the couple's childhoods.

Because Marian's family was too poor to afford "clothes good enough for church," she sat on the ground outside the church and listened as the pianos and organs played and the choirs and vocalists sang. From the classical gregorian chants of the Italian Catholic church, the traditional hymns from the Northern Baptist church and the soulful spirituals from the Southern Baptist church, Marian learned to imitate the different singing styles.

Dan, who studied and participated in many musical groups, has worked as a minister of music in many churches. With his help, Marian has developed her musical talents and often presents Christian musical programs from spirituals, to contemporary, to a cappella singing. Both the Mosemanns are members of the Bach and Handel Chorale of Jim Thorpe. Dan, a licensed minister, is often a guest speaker at churches and also is the technical director and coordinator for Marian's concerts.

For one year, Marian had hosted a one-hour radio program that featured recipes, household hints, and interviews with local people.

The Mosemanns, married for 34 years, met in New England. Because Dan had a Navy career, the Mosemanns moved at least 20 times, before he retired and studied at Lancaster Bible College and later settled in the Jim Thorpe area.

The Mosemanns have two children, now married, and two grandchildren.

Those wishing to contact the Mosemanns, may write to R.D. #2, Box 101, Lehighton, PA 18235-9511 or call (717) 645-5852.

Following are some of the Mosemanns' favorite recipes.

While Mosemann's Peanut Butter is no longer sold, Daniel and his wife Marian carry on the Mosemann tradition of sharing good tastes with friends and neighbors.

BEEF POT ROAST

3- to 4-pounds beef roast
1 tablespoon shortening
6 medium quartered onions
1 tablespoon seasoned salt
½ teaspoon seasoned pepper
1 tablespoon barbecue sauce
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1½ cups water
1 teaspoon A-1
¼ teaspoon tabasco

Brown meat on all sides in shortening in cooker. Drain.

Combine salt, pepper, and condiments with water. Add onions and condiment mixture to meat in the cooker.

Place cover on pan, set pressure control to 10 and cook 45 to 60 minutes, after pressure is reached.

Cool for 5 minutes, reduce pressure instantly. Serves 4 to 6.

Dan Mosemann

AUNT ROSIE'S NUT ROLL

3 cups flour
¾ cup sugar
3 eggs, beaten
1½ tablespoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter
2 teaspoons lemon extract
¼ cup milk

Reserve 1 tablespoon beat egg and 1 tablespoon milk in custard cup.

Sift dry ingredients into large bowl. Cream margarine, sugar, and extract in another bowl until light and creamy.

Add dry ingredients to creamed ingredients, alternating with the beaten eggs and milk.

If dough is too dry, add more milk; enough to make a soft but not sticky dough.

Cover and refrigerate dough for 30 minutes. Make 3 or 4 balls of dough of equal size. Roll out ¼ -inch thick into an oblong shape. Spread nut mixture onto oblong shaped dough. Leave ¼ -inch space from filling to edge of dough. Roll once over, tuck in ends and continue to roll like a jelly roll.

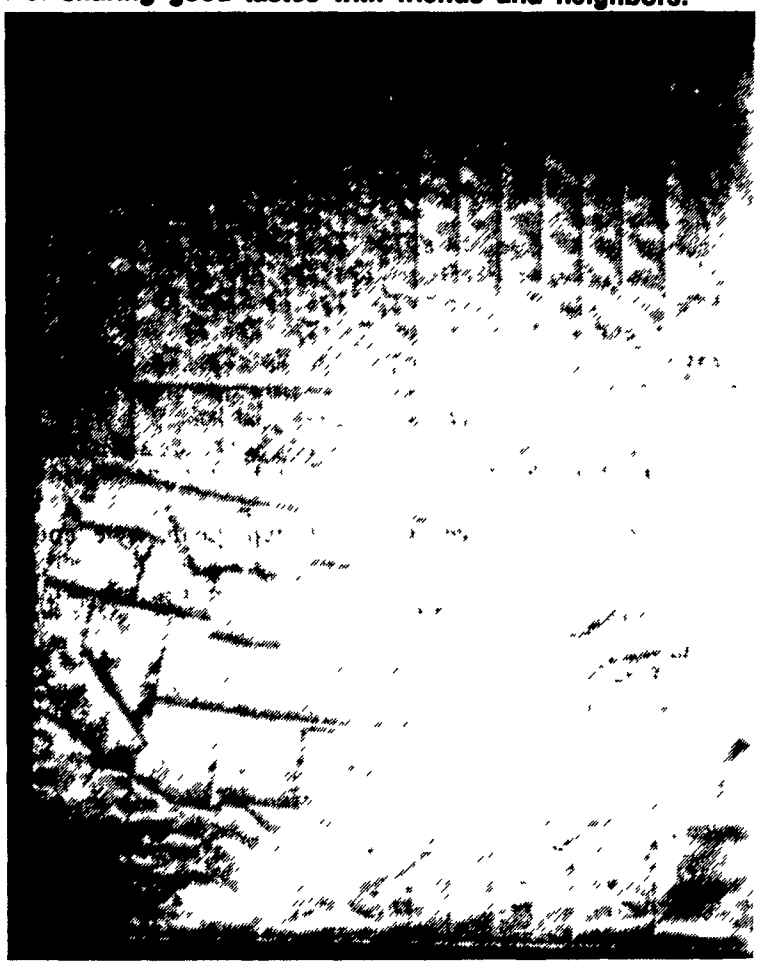
Place rolls on greased cookie sheets 3 inches apart. Brush tops of rolls with reserved beaten egg and milk mixture. Bake at 375 degrees for 20 minutes or until golden brown or light brown.

Cool rolls on cake racks until cold. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar, cut into slices, serve. To freeze, wrap rolls in foil; seal; make airtight. Use clear wrap on foil. Freeze. Thaw for 3 hours at room temperature.

Nut Filling:

½ cup butter, melted
2 cups walnuts, ground
1½ cups pecans, ground
7 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
2 teaspoons ground ginger

Melt butter in small saucepan. Grind together walnuts, pecans, cinnamon, and ginger. When you spread the nut mixture onto the dough, moisten the nuts with the butter to make a moist paste that will stick together when pinched. Too much butter will make the filling greasy.



This Unity quilt dedicated to the men and women who served in Desert Shield is on permanent display at the Jim Thorpe National Bank in Jim Thorpe. Marian won first prize and best of show for the quilt, which is stitched in a combination embroidery-quilting stitch developed by Marian.

PUMPKIN BREAD

4 medium eggs
4 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon ground cloves
1 teaspoon allspice
2 cups pumpkin
⅓ cup water
3 cups sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine oil, eggs, water, vanilla and pumpkin. Add spices, flour, baking soda, baking powder, sugar and salt. Mix well.

Grease and flour two loaf pans. Bake between 350 to 375 degrees for 45 minutes. Bread is done when finger touched lightly on top center doesn't leave an impression.

It is important to allow baked breads to cool for 5 minutes before removing from pan.

Cool until cold on rack. Wrap in plastic bags and freeze. Thaw in refrigerator a couple of hours before serving time. Add cool whipped topping or whipped cream. Enjoy!

Homestead Notes

"Microwave Magic"

By:
Carol Stark

Winter is soon over so why not take one more fling and make some homemade soup? This is a good tasting, quick-to-make soup that our family loves. It is a hearty soup that's a meal in itself. It can be served with crackers and fruit for a light supper, especially in the winter.

Cream of Broccoli and Cheese Soup

2 cups chopped celery
1 cup finely chopped onion
1 package (10 ounce) chopped broccoli
1 cup cottage cheese
2 cups whole milk
1 can (10 3/4 ounces) cream of chicken soup, undiluted
1/2 teaspoon salt, if desired
1/8 teaspoon white pepper

Cook celery, onion and broccoli in 2 1/2 quart covered casserole in microwave on HIGH for 6 minutes, stirring after 3 minutes. Set aside. Blend cottage cheese in blender or food processor until very smooth; slowly add milk while continuing to blend. Add chicken soup to cheese/milk mixture; blend; add mixture to cooked, undrained vegetables. Microwave on HIGH until heated through (about 3 minutes) without boiling. Add salt and pepper. Makes approximately 6 servings.

Macaroni Casserole with Polish Sausage

1/4 teaspoon dried dillweed
1 pound cooked Polish sausage, cut into 1/2 inch slices
2 cups thinly sliced zucchini
1/2 cup shredded Swiss cheese (2 ounces)
1 - 10 3/4 ounce can condensed cream of celery soup
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup sour cream
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
1/2 teaspoon minced dried onion
2 cups hot cooked corkscrew macaroni

In a mixing bowl stir together soup, milk, sour cream, pimiento, parsley flakes, dried onion, and seasoning. Add macaroni, sausage, and vegetable; gently toss until well combined. Turn into a 2 quart casserole. Micro-cook, covered, on 100 percent (HIGH) power for 15 to 20 minutes or until heated through and vegetable is tender, stirring twice. Top with cheese. Micro-cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (HIGH) for 1 to 2 minutes more or until cheese is melted. Makes 5 servings.

Pasta Pie Italian Style

1 pound ground beef
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon dried oregano, crushed
1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
1/2 cup shredded mozzarella cheese (2 ounces)
1 medium onion, chopped
1 - 7 1/2 ounce can tomatoes, cut up
1 - 6 ounce can tomato paste
1 tablespoon all purpose flour
2 beaten eggs
3 cups hot cooked spaghetti (6 ounces uncooked)
1/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup cream-style cottage cheese, drained

Crumble ground meat into a 2 quart casserole. Add onion; micro-cook, covered, on 100 percent power (HIGH) for 5 to 6 minutes or until meat is no longer pink, stirring once to break up meat. Drain off fat. Stir in undrained tomatoes, tomato paste, flour, and seasoning. Micro-cook, covered, on 100 percent power (HIGH) for 7 to 8 minutes or until mixture is thickened and bubbly, stirring once. Set aside.

Stir together the beaten eggs, hot cooked spaghetti, Parmesan cheese, and butter or margarine. Form spaghetti mixture into a "crust" in a greased 10 inch pie plate. Cover with vented clear plastic wrap. Micro-cook spaghetti crust on 50 percent power (MEDIUM) for 5 1/2 to 6 1/2 minutes or until 1 crust is just set, giving dish a half-turn after 3 minutes.

Spoon cottage cheese over bottom of crust. Spread meat mixture atop cottage cheese. Micro-cook, covered, on 50 percent power (MEDIUM) for 3 to 3 1/2 minutes or till hot, giving dish a half-turn after 1 1/2 minutes. Sprinkle with topping; let stand 5 minutes. Cut into wedges to serve. Makes 6 servings.

Scones Apricot

1/3 cup snipped dried apricots
1/4 cup apricot yogurt
1 cup all purpose flour
3 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup butter or margarine
1 cup quick cooking rolled oats
1 beaten egg
2 teaspoons sugar
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg

In a mixing bowl stir together flour, the 3 tablespoons sugar, baking powder, and salt. Cut in butter or margarine until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Stir in rolled oats and fruit. Stir together egg and liquid; add to dry ingredients, stirring just until moistened. Knead gently 4 or 5 strokes on a lightly floured surface. Pat dough into an 8 inch circle. Stir together the 2 teaspoons sugar and ground nutmeg or cinnamon. Sprinkle atop dough. Cut circle of dough into 12 wedges. Arrange wedges on a lightly greased 12 inch round nonmetal plate, leaving a least 1/2 inch space between wedges.

Micro-cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (HIGH) for 3 to 4 minutes or till done, rotating the plate a half-turn after 2 minutes. (When done, surface may still appear moist, but a wooden pick inserted into the center of the scones should come out clean.) Remove scones to a wire rack;cool for 5 minutes. Serve warm. Makes 12 scones.

Talents

PICKLED WATERMELON RIND

5 pounds watermelon rind
5 cups granulated sugar
2 cups distilled white vinegar
2 cups water
½ teaspoon oil of cloves
½ teaspoon oil of cinnamon

Pare watermelon and cut into 2-inch pieces.

Mix ½ cup salt with 2 quarts water and soak watermelon pieces overnight.

In the morning, drain and rinse with cold, clear water. Drain again.

Cook watermelon in water until fork tender, drain.

Combine sugar, vinegar, water, and spices. Bring to a boil and pour it over drained rind. Let stand overnight. The next morning, drain off syrup, cook syrup for 5 to 6 minutes. Repeat above procedure for 3 days. On the third day, cook rind and syrup together for 3 minutes. Fruit will remain clear if the oil of spices are used. Use water bath method. Makes 6 pints. Be sure to refrigerate overnight before serving.

PEAR OR PEACH SMOOTHIE

Peel and pit 3 pounds fully ripe pears or peaches

Cook over low heat until soft enough to go through a baby mill or fruit sieve. Place pulp in a sieve and allow to drip for 2 hours. Combine:

3 cups juice
1 cup pulp
¼ cup lemon juice
7½ cups granulated sugar
1 packet Certo

Measure fruit in large saucepan. Add the exact amount of sugar, then mix well.

Place over high heat, bring to a full rolling boil. Boil hard for 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, stir in Certo.

Allow mixture to set for 5 minutes, then skim off foam with metal spoon.

SCRIPTURE CAKE

(Uses biblical references for ingredients)

1 cup butter, softened (Judges 5:25)
2 cups sugar (Jeremiah 6:20)
1 tablespoon honey (Exodus 16:31)
6 medium-sized eggs (Isaiah 10:14)
3½ cups all-purpose flour, divided (I Kings 4:22)
2 teaspoons baking powder (I Corinthians 5:6)
½ teaspoon salt (Leviticus 2:13)
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon (I Kings 10:10)
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
1 cup water (Exodus 17:6)
2 cups raisins (I Samuel 30:12)
2 cups figs, chopped
1 cup chopped almonds (Genesis 43:11)

Set oven 325 9x5-inch loaf pan, greeased and floured.

Bake 1 hour and 30 minutes until wooden pick inserted does not leave impression.

Cream butter in large mixing bowl, add sugar gradually and beat well. Add honey, beat well. Add eggs, one at time, beating well after addition. Combine 3 cups flour, baking powder, salt, and spices; mix in bowl and add to cream mixture alternating with water, beat well after each addition. To leftover flour, coat raisins, figs, almonds; fold into batter. Spoon batter into loaf pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 hour and 30 minutes.

Cool cake in loaf pan for 10 minutes on cake rack. Remove cake to wire rack and cool completely. Yield: one 9-inch loaf. Does not need frosting.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Is the lion an endangered species?

I mean, as I look out the front window on this early March morning, a damp fog shrouds the meadow and the contoured fields curling around our sloping hills. Stark silhouettes of bare-branch trees in the meadow fencerow poke through the floating gray mist. And the edges of our world close in, nebulous walls that have shrunken our horizons to just a few hundred yards in every direction.

Like, where is the lion?

You know, "in like a lion, out like a lamb." March is supposed to do just that, march in like the conquering, victorious lion, with authority and briskness and vim and vigor. It's supposed to have gusty winds that whip the pond into sparkling glitter, shake out the last of the loose limbs and twigs in the maples and send up dependably, changeable, "March-like" weather conditions.

Instead, March tippy-toed in more lamb than lion-like. So, wooed by the dry, gentle weather, plowing got an early start around the neighborhood.

There is something mystical about plowing that seems to stir the heart and blood and soul of farmers. Perhaps it's the symbolical sense of turning under the past for a fresh beginning. It's "scratching the itch" of preparing for another growing season. It's breaking the bonds of wintry, inside barn and shop chores to burst free across the vistas of stubble and sod, as seen from a tractor seat.

Plowing, I'm convinced, is a sort of springtime love affair between farmers and their land.

Shiny plowshares turned over our first furrows of the season on an early March morning. Dark, rich earth, smelling wonderfully musky and fresh, is like no other scent. Loose and crumbly, it lies receptive to a promise, the seed embryos of the season's harvest.

Perfect soil conditions for planting. Too dry, too loose, too ideal. Too perfect, too early. Frankly, a little March mud would be more reassuring about the moisture possibilities of the next few months.

Then, as the pointed, steel bottoms move on to another field to slice and turn moist earth into gentle ridges, the plowing "groupies" appear. First four, then 40, then a few hundred of the graceful, white seagulls circle the moving equipment and alight on the fresh furrows in search of a quick snack.

Once a rarity in this no-seashore countryside, flocks of seagulls circling, swooping and scouting snacks in plow wakes have become another harbinger of spring.

In a finished field, a single, appreciative crow similarly "grazes" the bountiful buffet of underground goodies turned up by the passage of the shiny blades - fat earthworms, pudgy grubs and assorted larvae of bugs-to-be.

Walking out the road to examine the fresh furrows, I notice another sort of "plowing" on the roadbank along the field. The soil around the entrance to a very large groundhog hole is soft, crumbling and recently disturbed. And the inner part of the apron of grass circling the lower side of the hole is distinctly shorter than that nearer the outer edges, noticeably nibbled.

At least one hungry neighborhood rodent has paid no attention to the February advertisement that he/she stay inside and sleep until official Spring.

But then, our groundhogs aren't afraid of their shadows. Matter of fact, our groundhogs don't seem to be afraid of much of anything.

And so I hurry to finish these musings, so that, I, too, can get an early start on turning ground. If the low-lying field beyond the yard is as dry as the others, the Younger Farmer thought he might be able to make a pass through the garden. At least enough for a few onion sets and some early peas.

Yeah, maybe it's a little early; maybe the lion will roar in and chase off the lamb.

But my green thumb's gettin' itchy enough to wager that the lion has given up chasing lambs in favor of a long snooze.

Are Quilters Normal People?

There are two kinds of people in this this workd: those who quilt and those won don't. Quilters feel that they are really no different from other people, but...

• Quilters have basements filled with boxes of fabric, and rolls of batting leaning against the wall. Normal people have pingpong or pool tables, pictures on the walls and empty suitcases.

• Quilters children wear shoes at all times and never crawl once they have learned to walk. Normal peoples' kids run barefoot through the house. They have no fear of pins in their feet.

• Quilters have the ironing board next to the sewing machine. Their points and corners are perfectly pressed. Normal people have pressed skirts and pants, and they have all the buttons on their shirts.

• Quilters have co-ordinated bedrooms, with matching quilts, pillows and wall hangings. Normal people have co-ordinated wardrobes.

• Quilts read quilt magazines, quilt books and pattern instructions. Normal people read the newspaper, the latest novels and Reader's Digest.

• Quilters families eat chili, meals from the crockpot and anything they can fix themselves. Normal people eat quiche, vegetables and homemade cookies.

• Quilters drive out-of-state to visit quilt shows. Normal people visit State Parks and historic monuments.

• Quilters receive flyers from fabric stores announcing sales. Normal people clip coupons and take advantage of refund offers.

• Quilters receive a discount at the local quilt shop. Normal people have credit at major stores.

• Quilters use their dining room for quilting. Normal people have silk flower centerpieces and guests for dinner.

• Quilters save milk cartons and detergent boxes for storage. Normal people throw out their trash.

• Quilters carry 3x5 cards with yardage requirements and snips of fabric to be matched. Normal people carry 3x5 cards with their husband's sleeve length, and the children's sizes written on them.

• Quilters have rough hands, split nails, rounded shoulders and saddle bag hips. Normal people have manicures, straight backs and trim hips from attending Aerobic classes.

• Quilters have eyeglasses and purple shadows under their eyes from sewing late into the night. Normal people get 8 hours sleep and wear contact lenses, if they need glasses at all.

• Quilters have needle-nosed pliers, razor blades and sandpaper in their sewing boxes. Normal people have two spools of thread- one light, one dark- and a few assorted buttons.

• Quilters will never live long enough to finish everything they would like to do, and usually wear themselves out trying. Normal people make a will and wait for the end when they quietly fade away.

•Quilters leave works of art filled with memories that will one day be of historic importance.

Tips For Quilt Care

You do not have to wash your quilt all the time. Even if you have your quilt on your bed constantly, a day long airing on the clothesline every six months usually keeps the quilt looking good and smelling good as well.

You must never sit on your bed while the quilt is on it. This strains the fabric and puts undue strain-stress on the threads in the quilting.

Never allow the binding (edges of quilt) to touch the floor. Doing this will wear out the binding.

If something sticky (a spot small as a dime or large as a dinner plate) gets on your quilt, sponge the spot with cold water then blot dry.

When washing your quilt, always use cold water and Woolite detergent. Always line dry. Place quilt on line either longwise or side-wise and clip clothespins spaced 6-8 inces apart. Never line dry on a windy day. Allow quilt to line dry then fluff in automatic dryer for no longer than 10 minutes.

When removing the quilt from your bed, try to fold it in a different way each time. This helps to prevent permanent creases, which do not harm the quilt, but are unsightly when the quilt is on the bed.

These suggestions are made in an attempt to bring to your attention certain considerations which we advise when handling delicate items such as quilts. Since we have no control over the human element in such handling, we cannot be responsible for the outcome of such handling. All sales are final.

If you take proper care of your quilt, it will last for many years, remaining as beautiful as the day you purchased it.

ADC Meets Farmers' Needs

More Than $110 Million in Extra Payments

Robert B. McSparran
President

"At Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, our mission is to maximize returns to members. In the past four years, we returned more than $110 million to members in equity payments, over-order premiums and quality bonuses. That's an average of $31,500 per member. And these extra dollars are continuing at the rate of $1.5 million a month.

"When non-members ask me why they should belong to Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, I am happy to report that we are financially healthy, strong in membership and growing in sales. ADC is the region's largest and most fiscally-sound cooperative, with a guaranteed market and outstanding benefits.

"More dairy farmers joined us last year than at any time in the past decade. If you are not an ADC shipper and are worried about your own milk market, then you should talk to the cooperative that is facing the future with confidence."

HOW TO SURVIVE THE SANDWICH GENERATION

The squeeze is on for many Americans age 45 to 60.

Sandwiched between two generations and increasingly coping with the competing demands of aging parents, children, and booming careers, Americans in this age group may have little time for their own wellness.

The number of people in the sandwich generation is growing as Americans live longer. The over-50 group currently makes up 23 percent of the U.S. population and is expected to continue to expand. During the next 30 years, the over-50 population will increase by 74 percent. This dramatic shift will focus attention on the growing health concerns of this age group.

According to the National Center for Health Statistics, heart disease begins to take its toll after age 45. Older adults also are more likely to face problems with hypertension, diabetes, obesity and osteoporosis.

What specific steps can 45- to 60-year-olds take to prolong wellness by caring for their own health needs? Here are some tips developed by an expert nutrition and medical panel that was recently convened by the National Dairy Council.

* Be more selective about the foods you eat. Although nutritional requirements change very little as we age, our ability to burn calories slows. Therefore, we need to take greater care to consume foods that provide needed nutrients without extra calories.

* Recognize there are no "good" or "bad" foods. With careful planning, all foods can fit into the context of a low fat diet.

* To slow bone loss, improve your calcium consumption. Studies show that post-menopausal women who typically consume fewer than 400 mg of calcium per day could significantly reduce bone loss by increasing their calcium intake to 800 mg per day — the current Recommended Dietary Allowance. And osteoporosis does not only affect women. In fact, 20 percent of Americans with osteoporosis are men.

* Rely on foods and beverages to meet your particular nutritional needs. Foods and beverages are the preferred source of nutrients. If you take a daily supplement, however, make sure it contains vitamins and minerals in amounts no greater than 100 percent of the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances.

* Indulge in a physical activity you enjoy every day. Physical activity can help you achieve and maintain healthy weight and expand the amount and variety of foods you can enjoy.

* Count on yourself to prolong good health. Growing older doesn't mean it's all downhill. You can prolong and even improve your health by eating right and engaging in regular physical activity.

* Encourage food manufacturers and retailers to develop or provide products and services to meet your needs. You're a growing population and deserve to have your needs met. Today's technology is better equipped to develop products that meet those needs, be they low-fat products or reduced lactose products. So become involved and express your needs.

Cambria County Farm Women President

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

WINDBER (Somerset Co.) — For the third term, Hannah Bender is the Cambria County Farm Women president of four societies with 77 members. Hannah has been a Farm Women member for 50 years and has lived in Cambria County all her life until her recent retirement in bordering Somerset County.

Hannah joined Farm Women shortly after her marriage when her husband was stationed overseas as a medic in World War II.

When he returned home after more than a three-year separation, Hannah introduced him to some of her Farm Women friends.

"Now, I know why you like to go to Farm Women," her husband said. "You meet so many wonderful people there."

"I have met many wonderful people through Farm Women, not only in the county but also in many other counties," said Hannah who drives all over the state to attend Farm Women conventions in other counties.

Hannah has also served three years as a state director for the organization.

"When my children were small, I was only active in the local society, but when they grew up, I started attending meetings in other counties," Hannah said.

Hannah has been a widow for 18 years. Since then she has been to Haiti four times to teach Bible School and to Nigeria two times for a three-month term.

Hannah Bender

Although people in the U.S. often think Bible School is for children, in Nigeria and Haiti as many adults as children attend classes.

"People are so interested in learning. Children and adults memorize whole chapters of the Bible," Hannah said.

Because Nigeria is a Muslim country, Bibles are quite expensive. The limited amount of Bibles encourages the people to memorize scripture and since Nigeria is English speaking, Hannah had no language problems as a teacher.

In the area where Hannah worked, the people had no electricity or indoor bathroom facilities. The peoples' understanding of farming was limited.

"They don't have good yields because they just dig a hole and put in a seed instead of tilling the soil," Hannah said. "They need people to teach them how to grow vegetables."

Hannah's concern for the people continues. She often shows slides and gives talks on the mission work to church and Farm Women groups.

"I'm trying to save money to go back to Nigeria, but it's hard to save on a limited income," Hannah said.

Although Hannah lives in a retirement apartment complex, she hasn't retired from her many church and community activities. Several days a week she works with Meals On Wheels, delivering meals to the more than 100 residents in the apartment complex.

She volunteers two days a week for the Church of the Brethren where she works in the Nearly New and gift shops.

But one of the activities that Hannah is best known for is her willingness to provide transportation for those who need it.

"Years ago, I did not have a license and I needed to depend on others for transportation. Now, that I can drive, I want to help others. If they need to go to a doctor's appointment, to the hospital or shopping, I'm happy to take them," Hannah said. "It's the Christian way of doing things."

Hannah enjoys quilting, stringing beads, ceramics, and other crafts.

She has three children, seven grandchildren, and two great grandchildren whom she enjoys visiting.

Here is one of Hannah's favorite recipes to serve to family and friends.

Fun With Fondue

Fondue cooking is an informal way to serve family and guests a tasty, exciting dinner.

The most popular fondues are dipping raw beef or poultry into hot oil or dipping bread into hot melted cheese.

Dessert is often made by melting chocolate in a fondue pot and dipping in pieces of fruit or pound cake. A dessert fondue is popular as an after-dinner touch or a party attraction. The sauce is easy to prepare to keep warm and smooth.

CHEDDAR FONDUE

2 cans condensed cheddar cheese soup
Dash pepper
1 pound shredded Swiss cheese
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
4 ounces drained mushroom pieces
French bread, cooked ham or stuffed olives

Put soup in fondue pot and heat until hot, stirring occasionally. Add cheese, ¼ cup at a time. Stir until melted. Add garlic salt, pepper and mushrooms. Heat for 3 to 4 minutes. Spear cubes of French bread, cooked ham chunks or stuffed olives with fondue forks and dip into fondue. Serves 8 to 10.

Dauphin Co. Dairy Promotion Committee

CHEESE FONDUE

3 cups coarsely shredded Gruyere or Swiss cheese
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 clove garlic, halved
1¼ cups dry white wine
1 tablespoon Kirsch or dry sherry
Dash nutmeg
Dash pepper
Cubed French or Italian bread or raw vegetables

Bring shredded Gruyere or Swiss cheese to room temperature. Toss flour with cheese; set aside.

Rub inside of a fondue pot with garlic halves; Discard garlic. Set pot aside.

In a medium saucepan, heat wine over medium heat until small bubbles rise to surface. Just before wine boils, reduce heat to low and stir in cheese mixture, a little at a time, stirring constantly and making sure cheese melts before adding more. Stir until mixture bubbles gently.

Stir in Kirsch or sherry, nutmeg, and pepper. Transfer cheese mixture to the fondue pot; keep mixture bubbling gently over a fondue burner. Serve with bread cubes or raw vegetables. Serves 5.

Cabot

CHOCOLATE FONDUE

8-ounces semisweet chocolate
14-ounces sweetened condensed milk
⅓ cup whole milk
Fondue dippers such as pound cake squares, strawberries, pineapple chunks or marshmallows.

In heavy saucepan, melt chocolate over low heat. Stir in sweetened condensed milk and whole milk until well combined. Heat thoroughly. Transfer to a fondue pot. If mixture becomes too thick, stir in a little more milk. Spear desired fondue dipper with a fondue fork and dip into fondue. Makes 8 servings.

TOMATO-CHEESE FONDUE

2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon cornstarch
⅓ cup finely chopped onion
½ teaspoon salt
3 cups shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
1 can condensed tomato soup, undiluted
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Turn on heat to medium; melt the butter or margarine. Add onion and stir until it becomes soft. Stir in salt and cornstarch, then the tomato soup. Heat, stirring frequently. Reduce the flame to low and add mustard, Worcestershire sauce and cheese, stirring until the cheese melts.

Spear bread cubes on fondue forks and dip into fondue, giving a good stir each time.

Harrington, Del.

CRAB OR LOBSTER FONDUE

1 can condensed cream of shrimp soup
¼ cup milk
½ cup shredded cheddar or American cheese
7½ ounce crab meat or lobster, drained and flaked
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Dash paprika and white pepper

Combine milk with the soup in the fondue pot. Cover and heat over medium heat, stirring frequently. Fold in remaining ingredients, reserving sherry. Heat to serving temperature over low heat. Spear 1-inch cubes of day-old French bread and dip into fondue, giving a good stir each time.

Dorothea Coverdale
Harrington, Del.

PEPPERMINT FONDUE

½ pound thin mints
3 tablespoons cream

Combine mints and cream in fondue pot. Stir and melt over low heat until melted. Keep on low heat while serving. Dip fruit or pastries in the mixture.

Dorothea Coverdale
Harrington, Del.

CLASSIC SWISS FONDUE

4 cups shredded Swiss cheese
¼ cup flour
1 clove garlic, halved
2 cups white grape juice
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon Worchestershire sauce
Dash nutmeg

Toss together cheese and flour. Rub the inside of a 3-quart saucepan with garlic, discard garlic. Add grape juice and heat until bubbles rise. Add cheese, ½ cup at a time; over medium heat. Stir until cheese melts after each addition. Add salt, Worchestershire sauce and nutmeg. Put into fondue pot; serve with chunks of French bread, fresh vegetables cut into strips or pieces of apple or pear.

Janice Hamilton
Blair Co. Dairy Princess

BUTTERSCOTCH ICE CREAM FONDUE

½ cup butter
1½ cups brown sugar
¾ cup light corn syrup
1 tablespoon water
1 cup vanilla ice cream
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Melt butter in heavy 2-quart saucepan; stir in sugar, corn syrup and water. Bring to a boil. Stir in ice cream; simmer, stirring constantly until mixture reaches (230 degrees). Cool slightly. Add vanilla. Transfer to fondue pot over low heat. Suggested dippers: angel food or pound cake, apples, grapes, pears, Swiss, gouda, and cream cheese. Yield 2½ cups.

PARTY MEATBALLS

1 pound ground beef
¼ cup milk
½ cup bread crumbs
1 tablespoon chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup sherry
½ cup catsup

Combine ground beef, bread crumbs, milk, onion, and 1 teaspoon salt. Shape into small balls. Melt butter in large fry pan and brown balls on all sides. Pour off fat. Mix sherry and catsup and pour over balls. Put in fondue pot and cover and simmer for about 20 minutes.

Barbara Bedard
N. Lawrence, NY

CARAMEL FONDUE

14 ounces caramels
⅔ cup light cream
½ cup miniature marshmallows

Put cream and caramels into fondue pot, turning heat to low. Stir while caramels melt. Add marshmallows and mix until blended. If fondue becomes too thick, add a little more cream.

May dip in the following: Mandarin oranges, grapefruit wedges, apple slices, banana chunks, pineapple chunks, tangerine sections, grapes, peach slices or pastries.

Featured Recipe

Fondue, for the Swiss and French, means gathering around the fondue pot to dip bread, vegetables, and fruit into thick, melted cheese.

The Italian version is Fonduta, a thickened cheese-milk mixture served in individual dishes rather than a special pot. Toasted bread and a vegetable garnish such as sauteed mushrooms are served in the dish.

Swiss and Parmesan are the cheese choices for this Italian Fonduta. Chunky triangles of Italian bread act as dippers. It's a hearty dish with a big calcium bonus.

On a cold or rainy spring night, serve Fonduta with crisp vegetable relishes. Round out the meal with a bowl of fruit and a plate of cookies. Then linger for conversation over a whipped cream and coffee beverage.

Fondue and Fonduta are casual meal ideas, great for Sunday night suppers. Both have their virtues, and both are good ways to add calcium to the diet. Serve them alternately for variety's sake.

FONDUTA

4 cups shredded Swiss cheese
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
⅓ cup flour
1½ teaspoons dry mustard
¼ teaspoon white pepper
2 cups milk
2 egg yolks
Sauteed mushroom slices
Italian bread toast triangles, buttered

Toss together Swiss cheese, Parmesan cheese, flour, mustard, and pepper. Heat milk to simmering. Add cheese mixture, ½ cup at a time, over medium-low heat, stirring until cheese is melted after each addition. Beat egg yolks slightly; add a little of the hot cheese mixture, beating vigorously. Return all to saucepan, stirring constantly. Continue to cook and stir until mixture is thickened and smooth. Ladle immediately into heated soup bowls. Arrange several mushroom slices on top of each Fonduta. Stand 3 toast triangles, point side up, around the inside of each bowl. Serve at once.

Family Celebrations Create Strong Families

Celebrate — to commemorate an anniversary or holiday with festivity; to honor publicly; to have a good time.

In my childhood family, you could count on Sunday night bedtimes being filled with laughter and giddiness. We also were guaranteed "Wacky Cake" for dessert on the anniversary of my parents' first date. And odd as it may seem, there was great celebration when we let the cows out of the barn and into the pasture for the first time each spring. These were some of my family celebrations.

My grandparents used to host an open house for the entire neighborhood each time their Night-Blooming Cereus flowered. The bloom would last only one night, and a sign in the front yard would invite guests to see the bud open shortly after dark. "Night-Blooming Cereus Tonight Neighbors and Viewers Welcome".

Having special festive moments or traditions within the family are important. These times give each member a sense of sharing and connectedness.

Here are some familiar and not-so-familiar suggestions for creating unique family celebrations. Celebrate the first day of spring, Christmas in July, or half-birthdays. Once each month designate a "Winning Family Night" where you salute each other for your personal qualities and achievements. Use your best dinnerware and candles. Write short notes describing things you like about other family members. Read them before beginning the family banquet. You may want to make a cake. You could even make homemade trophies from paper cups or milk cartons.

As an alternative, you may salute one person at a time. Choose a special plate or placemat that would be a symbol for family celebration. Each time you wanted to honor a family member for a special accomplishment or "just for being" place that dish at his or her space at the table. These festivities remind children and adults that you are proud of them and that they are important to the family.

A less-involved way of creating family traditions is to develop a routine of going places together — the library, the farmer's market, a park. An activity becomes a tradition if you repeat it at the same time each month or each year.

Spring begins in March, you may want to mark the change of seasons by taking an hour that weekend to pick up trash along your road or highway. This not only fosters family togetherness, it also promotes caring for the land.

These celebrations focus on people not things. They give each of us a new sense of confidence. They remind each person that others care and that they all are important.

Consumer confidence is down. Government systems seem to be in chaos. Family celebrations are one small effort to bring some stability and confidence back into our communities. What can you celebrate?

Berks Executive Board

The Berks County Farm Women Executive Board meeting was held recently at the Agriculture Center with 22 members attending.

The meeting was opened by president, Joan Loeb.

Devotions were given by Dorothy Stricker of Group #7.

For roll call, we were to tell "If there were Olympics in farming, what would we win the gold medal in?"

The groups will participate at the bingo in the main building at Berks Heim on April 9.

The Berks Heim volunteer dinner will be held on April 23 at the 4-H building. Two ladies from each group are invited.

Janet Schlegel reported for agribusiness. The dates for the Scenic River Festival are July 30 and 31 and August 1 and 2.

The Spring Rally, hosted by Lancaster County, will be held on May 27, at the Host Resort and Conference Center, Lancaster.

During the year 1991, four new members were received into Berks County Farm Women groups. A certificate was awarded. Another certificate was received for 100% in safety programs during 1991.

An invitation was extended to each group by Group #11 who will have a fashion show at Boscov's in Lebanon on March 23 at 8 p.m.

The next County Board meeting will be held on May 4th at 8:00 P.M. at the Agriculture Center.

Cook's Question Corner

If you are looking for a recipe but can't find it, send your recipe request to Cook's Question Corner, in care of Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. There's no need to send a SASE. If we receive an answer to your question, we will publish it as soon as possible.

Answers to recipe requests should be sent to the same address.

QUESTION — James Everich, Allentown, N.J., would like a recipe for cheese stuffing. If we do not receive an answer to this request within one week, we will drop this request.

QUESTION — Christine Rudolph, New Oxford, would like a recipe for pork bologna without beef. She would like the smoking temperatures and times, if possible.

QUESTION — G. Snyder, Mechanicsburg, would like a recipe for Peanut Butter Nougats that taste like those made by Archway.

QUESTION — A Lancaster County reader would like recipes for making spinach noodles, tomato noodles or tomato macaroni and dark brown noodles made from whole-grain flour.

QUESTION — Mary Wagner, McClue, would like a recipe to fry down sausage to can it. She heard there is a way to fry it and pour the lard on top to preserve the sausage.

QUESTION — Cynthia Anton, Morgantown, requests a recipe for deviled ham that tastes like the Underwood brand.

QUESTION — Barbara Randall, Holcomb, N.Y., would like to know how to make fried mozzarella cheese sticks with a crumb coating.

QUESTION — Priscilla Grube, Mohrsville, would like a recipe for homemade hot dogs.

QUESTION — Helen Myers, Dillsburg, would like to know where she can purchase an electric chicken plucker.

QUESTION — Helen Myers, Dillsburg, would like a recipe for turnip ice cream.

QUESTION — J. Haugh, Red Lion, would like a recipe for beef salad for sandwiches like those served at Plain and Fancy Restaurant.

QUESTION — J. Haugh, Red Lion, requested a recipe for corn fritters using Bisquick mix.

QUESTION — Faye Detter, Mechanicsburg, would like a recipe for pumpkin cheese cake.

QUESTION — Barbara Nagy, Northampton, is looking for a recipe for black diamond steak.

QUESTION — Norma Burkholder, Denver, would like a recipe for vegetable drink similar to V-8 juice.

QUESTION — Maryanne Goheen, Morgantown, requests a recipe for red cabbage like that served family style in a German restaurant near New Mahoning.

QUESTION — A Johnstown reader would like a recipe for canning or freezing dandelions.

QUESTION — A Johnstown reader wants a recipe for Pineapple Upside Down Cake where the batter is poured into the pan and the pineapples placed on top. She said that the pineapples sink to the bottom while baking so that when the cake is baked and turned on a plate, the pineapples are on top.

QUESTION — Grace Barley, Conestoga, would like a recipe for a lemon pudding sponge cake.

ANSWER — Edith Moore, Pennington, N.J., requested a recipe for Swedish meat balls and Swedish rice pudding. Thanks to Doris Diebert, Everett, and to other readers for sending recipes.

Swedish Meat Balls

4 cups Corn Flakes OR 2 cups Wheaties
1 pound ground beef
1 small onion, minced
½ green pepper, chopped
1 egg
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons shortening
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 cup water or milk

Measure cereal, crush, and mix with beef, onion, green pepper, egg, milk, and seasonings. Shape into balls about an inch in diameter. Brown on all sides in shortening. Pour into a greased casserole. Mix soup and water or milk and pour over meatballs. Sprinkle top with paprika. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Serves 4.

Swedish Meatballs

1 pound ground beef
¼ cup dry bread crumbs
¼ cup minced onion
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
10½ -ounce can condensed cream of celery soup
½ soup can water
1 to 2 tablespoons minced dill pickle
Cooked rice

Mix beef, bread crumbs, onion, egg, and parsley. Shape into 24 meatballs. In skillet, brown meatballs; pour off drippings. Stir in soup, water, and pickle. Cover; cook over low heat 20 minutes; stir often. Serve with rice. Serves 4.

ANSWER — Elaine Hausman, Germansville, requested a recipe for Vanilla Cake. Thanks to a reader for sending a recipe that she said is at least 30 years old.

Vanilla Funny Cake

Line a glass pie pan with pastry, making a high-fluted rim.

Cake:

1¼ cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
½ cup milk
1 egg
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Measure and sift flour, baking powder, salt, and sugar in a bowl. Beat together egg, shortening, vanilla, and milk; add dry ingredients. Beat 2 minutes. Pour into pastry-lined pie plate. Pour lukewarm sauce over batter, sprinkle 3 tablespoons chopped nuts or coconut on top. Bake 350 degrees for 50 to 55 minutes.

Cook sauce first and let cool while making pastry and cake.

Sauce:

In saucepan, combine ¼ cup butter, ½ cup packed brown sugar, 2 tablespoons corn syrup. Cook and stir over low heat until it boils. Add 3 tablespoons water; boil 1 to 2 minutes. Remove from heat, add 1 teaspoon vanilla.

ANSWER — Dorothea Coverdale, Harrington, Del., requested a recipe for cranberry cookies. Thanks to Maggie Berry, Aston, for sending a recipe.

Christmas Cranberry Cookies

2 cups butter, room temperature
1 cup packed light brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
2 large eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
4½ cups flour

Beat all ingredients except flour in a large bowl until fluffy. With mixer on low, gradually beat in flour just until blended. Chill dough thoroughly or overnight.

Cranberry filling:

⅔ cup cranberries
⅓ cup granulated sugar
¼ cup raisins
3 tablespoons water
3 tablespoons orange marmalade
¼ teaspoon vanilla

Bring cranberries, sugar, raisins, and water to boiling in small saucepan. Reduce heat to low. Simmer 5 to 6 minutes, stirring often, until berries have burst and mixture is slightly thickened. Remove from heat, stir in marmalade and vanilla, cool to room temperature. On a well-floured surface, roll half of dough at a time to ⅛ -inch thickness. Cut with a 2-inch round cutter. Place half the rounds 1-inch apart on ungreased cookie sheet. Top each with 1 teaspoon filling. Cut a ¾ -inch piece from center or remaining rounds. The open ends of a thimble work to cut a small hole in center to allow steam to escape. Place over filled rounds. Press edges with fingertips to seal then crimp with a fork. Bake 10 to 12 minutes at 350 degrees.

ANSWER — Helen Henry, Macungie, wanted to know how to get cheddar cheese to melt and run on broccoli instead of hardening. Thanks to an anonymous reader who wrote that it is difficult to keep cheddar cheese soft after melting because it not only hardens again but it also becomes very oily. She suggests using Velveeta or Cheez Whiz, which can be melted in the microwave within a minute.

Fondue

SOUR CREAM SUPREME

1 cup dairy sour cream
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
½ teaspoon salt

Combine sour cream, mustard, horseradish, and salt. Use as a dip for meat balls. Yield: approximately 1 cup.

SOUTH-OF-THE-BORDER DIP

½ cup dairy sour cream
⅓ cup chili sauce
2 tablespoons sweet pickle relish
1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon salt

Combine sour cream, chili sauce, relish, horseradish, Worcestershire sauce, and salt. Use as a dip for meat balls. Yield: approximately 1 cup.

CHOCOLATE ICE CREAM FONDUE

6 squares semi-sweet chocolate OR 6 ounces semi-sweet chocolate pieces
1 cup vanilla ice cream, softened
¾ cup sugar
½ cup butter
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 to 2 tablespoons creme de menthe, optional

Melt chocolate over low heat in heavy saucepan. Add ice cream, sugar, and butter. Cook, stirring constantly, about 5 minutes or until mixture is thickened. Stir in vanilla and creme de menthe, if desired. Transfer to fondue pto over low heat. Suggested dippers: Cubes of angel food or pound cake; apples, pear, bananas, Swiss, gouda, and cream cheese. Yield: 2 cups.

Leftover fondue may be used for ice cream toppings.

19th Century Buildings Painted In Rainbow Colors Attract Customers For Agricultural Products

SHARTLESVILLE (Berks Co.) — Historic preservation and rainbow colors have given this small rural town a new look and provided a growing outlet for Pennsylvania agricultural and craft products.

After five years of restoration, preservation, cleaning and painting, Barry J. Block and Karen Kinnane have this late 19th century village literally "blooming with color!" It has become a striking advertisement for Pennsylvania products and culture.

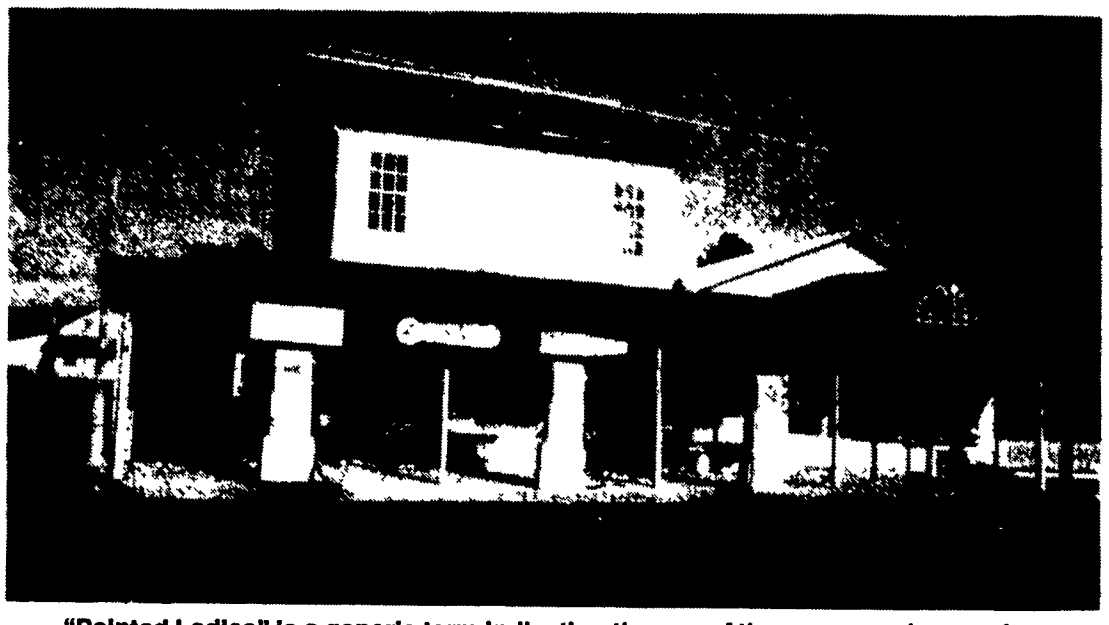
In 1986, the pair purchased a tiny 19th century log house in the town's commercial district. A year of intensive restoration brought back the little house's quaint charm. The two then decided to expand their efforts to include several other vacant structures in the Victorian village. Buying an old country store and a Victorian two-family home kept them busy for another year.

"A lot of restoration here is straightforward," Karen said. "We keep peeling off later changes and siding, much like peeling the skin off an onion, to get to the useable inside part. Then we replace any of the original structure which is damaged or missing, especially the decorative gingerbread trim which provides character to these structures. The trim was often removed in mid-20th century "remuddling" in an attempt to modernize old buildings. We also replace all modern asphalt roofing with authentic 19th century style standing seam tin roofs. These two changes alone bring out the Victorian charm of the structures."

"To ensure that passers-by notice the progress, we transform each completed restoration with a "Painted Ladies" color scheme." Karen said, "I don't consider our paint jobs a success unless we see lots of black tire marks in the street in front of a newly painted building. That's how I know people are noticing the improvements." laughed Karen.

"Painted Ladies" is a generic term indicating the use of three or more harmonious colors which emphaisze the lacy gingerbread trim on these houses. The "Painted Ladies" movement began in San Francisco, Cal. in the 1960s, when a hippy commune decided to paint their plain gray Victorian house. A trip to the city dump garnered them 17 partially full cans of paint, each a different color. Proceeding to paint the entire house, they utilized all seventeen colors. Needless to say, their house was noticed! Many owners of similar homes which had been painted one or two subdued colors began to use three or more bright colors to emphasize the architecture of their buildings and the "Painted Ladies" movement was born. It rapidly spread to Cape May, N.J. and now to Sharlesville. "Painted Ladies" buildings are the subject of six best-selling books by Michael Larsen and Elizabeth Pomada as well as a glossy calendar each year. Larsen and Pomada's next book, due out October 1992 will mention the "Painted Ladies" of Shartlesville.

After restoring three of their seven properties, Barry and Karen were faced with the task of putting them to good use. The first structure, a small log house with a tiny barn out back was easy. It was rented as a home. The 19th century store building on Main Street became a general store again, with a unique twist. It is called the Shartlesville General Store. The hot pink and vivid purple building across from the Fire House was reopened as a showcase for all Pennsylvania made products. It features Pennsylvania jam, jelly, pickles, relishes, sauerkraut, stuffed pickled peppers, honey, egg noddles, candy, locally made brooms, quilts, potholders, pincushions, woodenware, folk art ornaments, dried flowers, fresh flowers and produce in season. These items are displayed in an authentic 19th century store complete with oak counters, display cabinets, lamp chimney rack, broom holders, even a floor model seed display case. Also for sale is a large assortment of antique advertising such as colorful tins, soap powder boxes, butter churns, seed packets with delightful illustrations of old-time vegetables and flowers, bar soap, early seed catalogs, lard pails, butcher tools, candy boxes, egg boxes, mason jars, antique toys and vintage fabrics. Youngsters flock to displays of "penny" candy in old fashioned "serve yourself" jars. Favorites like rootbeer barrels, salt water taffey, jawbreakers, dots, pipes, whips, rock candy, red hot dollars, cinnamon bears and fruit slices are all Pennsylvania made.



"Painted Ladies" is a generic term indicating the use of three or more harmonious colors that emphasize the lacy gingerbread trim on houses. The "Painted Ladies" movement began in California during the hippies movement when a commune painted their Victorian house with 17 partially full cans of paint found at a city dump.

The Shartlesville General Store features all Pennsylvania-made products such as jam, sauerkraut, homemade brooms, folk art ornaments, and more displayed in antique cabinets and oat counters.

People cannot resist hunting up Karen Kinnane to find out what kind of person would live in a hot pink and vivid purple house.

"Being on the Hex Highway (Old Rt. 22) in the heart of Pennsylvania Dutch Country, we have lots of tourists in the store. From the start we refused to sell tacky plastic things that said "Souvenier of Pennsylvania" on top and "Made in Hong Kong" underneath. We wanted to give visitors a real "taste of Pennsylvania" so we hunted up authentic, old-fashioned Pennsylvania jams, jellies, preserves, pickles. It was great fun to "taste test" the potential products. To find suppliers we visited every farm stand and farmer's market we could find," said Karen. "We bought one of every food item that was made in the state. If it passed our rigid "taste test" we added it to our stock. We particularly tried to patronize small, family type operations whenever possible. We stock old timey things Grandma used to make and supermarkets don't carry, like tomato jam, quince jam, grape butter, peach butter, quince honey, rhubarb jam, jelly, conserve, real homemade catsup, seven-day pickles, sauerkraut, egg noodles, bread and butter pickles and fabulous stuffed pickled peppers which are so gorgeous I sell more of them for shelf ornaments than for eating, even though they are no-fat and no-cholesterol!"

The store's philosophy is that selling only Pennsylvania products gives the tourists an accurate look at Pennsylvania culture, adds money to the local economy, gives the buyer a superior product and acts as free "goodwill" advertising when tourists share their purchases with friends back home who will want to visit that colorful, quaint town where they sell the most fabulous local food and crafts.

"We sell several types of locally made corn brooms, even a child's size, displayed in old-fashioned broom holders, That's a useful souvenier." Karen feels. "We sell quilts, many produced by Old Order Amish and Mennonite women who prefer to work at home on their farms instead of in a store or factory. They also produce quilt tops, crochet and woven rugs, pot holders, pin cushions, patchwork Christmas ornaments, patchwork pillows and animal shaped pillows made from parts of antique quilts. We make patchwork quilts to order in sizes from doll to King. Color combinations are limited only by the client's imagination. We also repair antique quilts with vintage fabrics. We have delightful wooden berry carriers in various sizes and antique berry baskets are available to fill them.

These berry carriers are individually made by a local woodworker and they are extremely popular with customers because they are so handy around the house. The divided ones are great for carrying cultery and napkins to elegant, impromptu picnics. The ones without dividers are used by knitters and quilters to carry work in progress and they are great toy carriers for children. Of course they are fine for berry and vegetable picking too. One of the divided berry carriers with a selection of eight locally made jams and jellies is a unique and lasting useful gift. The shop features charming, hand-painted wooden Christmas ornaments which are designed, sawed, sanded and painted by one local woman. These Victorian style ornaments depict an antique teddy bear on a hobby horse, a Pappa mouse and a Mama mouse in period clothing, Amish children, holly, bells, country geese, Santas and an antique sheep pull toy.

After launching the General Store, the couple's next challenge was to restore and utilize a Main

Seeing Eye Pups Need Homes

MORRISTOWN, N.J.— The Seeing Eye, America's preeminent dog guide school, needs volunteers to raise pups that grow up to become Seeing Eye dogs. Seeing Eye puppies born this month will be ready to be placed in the homes of volunteer puppy-raisers in late spring.

Each volunteer in The Seeing Eye Puppy-Raising Program/ 4-H-Project makes his or her pup a member of the family, teaching it basic obedience and exposing it to a variety of social situations. Volunteers also take their pups to local, monthly 4-H meetings.

Seeing Eye representatives stay in close touch with the volunteers to help with the puppies' care and handling. When the pups are between 12 and 14 months of age, they return to The Seeing Eye to begin their formal training. At the end of a three-month training period, the dogs are matched with blind people, and this new team trains together for 20 to 27 days.

The Seeing Eye pays veterinary bills and provides a monthly allowance to defray other puppy-raising costs.

The program is open to children between the ages of nine and 19, and adults who are home during the day. Puppy-raisers must live in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, or Delaware.

The Seeing Eye, a philanthropy, has placed more than 10,000 specially bred and trained dog guides with blind people throughout the United States and Canada.

For further information about the puppy-raising program, call your local county 4-H agent.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Recently, while hunting for something else, I happened to find an 1881 Green's Almanac. This booklet was published in Woodbury, N.J. It contains tattered maps printed by Rand, McNally & Co. of Chicago. But the printing is so small that it is almost impossible to read the names of the towns.

The business person who handed out this almanac was the local storekeeper, F.P. Bard of Oregon, Pa. His advertisement says that he sells hats, caps, boots, paints, glass, coal oil, pure spices, groceries, dress goods, and patent medicines. Now it is this last item that is extolled throughout all the pages.

There are three kinds of medicine mentioned. They are Boschee's German Syrup, Green's August Flower, and Ague Conqueror. These three kinds of medicine will cure most any ailment according to the advertisement. Among those named are dyspepsia, liver complaint, rheumatism, dizzy head, nervous derangement, and sour stomach.

Each bottle came with a cork screw so that the "cork could be drawn without breaking and losing any of the virtues or freshness of the medicine." Also mentioned at the bottom of one page is the "wire loop" used on the almanac so that it can be "hung up in one place." The loop is still attached!

I would guess that the almanac was saved because it was the year that my uncle was born. It was the custom to give one to a newborn child. I remember that my mother gave one to our first child and I still have the one issued in the year of my birth. It has my birthday circled in ink. People seemed to be more superstitious long ago and were very interested in the signs of the zodiac.

Consumers Shift Toward Low-Fat Desserts

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)— Before a la mode came to mean "topped with ice cream," it meant "according to fashion or style." These days, fashionable desserts may be served a la frozen yogurt.

Many consumers are choosing lower-fat dairy products and frozen desserts to reduce cardiovascular health risks associated with fat, cholesterol and weight gain. "Some people expected frozen yogurt to be just a passing fad," says Penn State agricultural economist Robert Herrmann. "But it seems to be winning a permanent place in the diets of Americans, who are drawn by its taste as well as its lower fat content."

Herrmann and rural sociologist Rex Warland are tracking shifts in dairy product consumption. The data they have collected so far shows that, at least where frozen desserts are concerned, Americans are heeding the call for a healthier diet.

Results from a fall 1991 survey of 1,200 men and women nationwide showed that 38 percent of respondents had eaten frozen yogurt in the previous four weeks, which was down somewhat from a similar survey conducted about a year earlier.

"The proportion of frozen yogurt eaters seems to have declined slightly over the course of the year," says Herrmann. "But more significantly, there was a shift away from regular frozen yogurt toward low-fat and nonfat varieties."

Herrmann says regular ice cream was still the most widely consumed frozen dessert — 51 percent of respondents had eaten it in the four weeks preceding the survey — followed by frozen yogurt and premium ice cream (36 percent).

"Although ice cream remained popular, 43 percent of those surveyed said they had cut their ice cream use in the past few years because of fat and cholesterol concerns," he says. "One-third of this group said they had stopped eating ice cream entirely. But for most people, we continue to see a mixed consumption pattern. Many consumers tend to eat some combination of higher- and lower-fat frozen desserts."

Who is paying most attention to their intake of fat and cholesterol? According to the survey, women are more concerned than men; the highly educated are more worried than the less educated; and the middle aged and elderly are more concerned than the young. "Most people don't really get serious about their diet until they have some kind of health crisis," Herrmann notes.

Although the desire for a healthy diet has been a major factor in the shift to lower- fat dairy products and frozen desserts, it is by no means the only factor. "One surprise was how many respondents said they liked the taste of frozen yogurt," Herrmann says. "Frozen yogurt may be regarded by some as a poor substitute for ice cream. But one-fourth of yogurt eaters preferred its taste, and half thought frozen yogurt and ice cream were equally tasty."

Berks 4-H'ers Surprise Leader Lila Newhard With Party

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks County Correspondent

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Lila Newhard thought she was going out Saturday night for a quiet supper at a local restaurant with her husband and longtime 4-H protege Michelle Wojszwillo.

But the members of the Leesport 4-H community club she has led for more 20 years had something else in mind to honor someone who has given so much over the years.

It was a surprise party in the 4-H Community Center attended by about 70 4-H'ers, former and present, and their families.

"The club has never gotten her anything for her years of service," said Joanne Wojszwillo, one of the organizers and mother of Michelle.

She and Oralee Folk, whose sons are in the club, came up with the idea of having a surprise party. Everyone they contacted immediately agreed with the idea.

Lila, who works as a bank teller during the day, has been immersed in 4-H with a passion ever since she got her daughter, Sheila, now 20, involved.

"I thought I'd end it after Sheila finished school," a beaming Lila said after she arrived in the center to a chorus of congratulations. Nor does she yet have any plans to retire. "I just can't believe this," she said, looking around at her friends.

Along with a supper, the party committee scheduled a "This Is Your Life" program honoring Lila. The final surprise of the evening was a memory book containing written remembrances from former and present 4-H'ers.

The quilted cover of the book was designed and sewn by Folk. The design mirrors that of the Leesport 4-H banner, which won the top honor at the 4-H Recognition Night banquet in November.

For Lila, though, it's not the string of awards that motivated her through the years. It was the kids.

"The kids were so good, I just couldn't (quit)," she said. "These kids are pretty spunky."

For 20 years, Lila has taught 4-Hers how to cook and sew. Many of her charges have won prizes at county, regional, and state levels. The several boys she has in her club each year throw themselves into the sewing projects as much as the girls, she said.

"The boys like to sew," Lila said. "They do a beautiful job, very accurate."

They also like to cook, she said. The cooking section of the club is conducted in Lila's kitchen, and she tries to introduce them to different foods.

Like cheese fondue.

Wrote Phil Evans on his memory page for Lila's book: "I liked when we made cheese fondue and nobody liked it except me."

It's hard to imagine kids not liking cheese fondue, but Lila doesn't allow grimaces to deter her from the lesson.

"She makes everyone taste it," Folk said.

Along one wall in the center were hung more than a dozen garments made over the years by club members, including wool suits, shirt dresses, jersey knit cardigans, skirts and blouses, even shorts. Some were bedecked with the ribbons they won at fairs.

Jeanette (Sechler) Nuss, the oldest alumni of Lila's club who attended the party, proudly pointed out the skirt she made under Lila's tutelage in her second year in the club.

"I made it when I was 11," she said.

Now, however, with chasing after her own kids, the only sewing she has time for is mending, she said.

Joanne Wojszwillo remembers a time when Lila's ingenuity saved the day.

It was the night before fashion review, and her daughter, Stephanie, was finishing up a pink and white striped blazer. Suddenly, she noticed she had cut a hole in the back.

"It was 'Lila to the rescue,'" Joanne recalled. Lila came over and suggested they sew a horizontal yoke across the back of the jacket, covering the hole. They worked into the wee hours of the morning, but the jacket was finished.

And how did it do at fashion review?

"It won!" Joanne said.

The Newhard's basement is like a shrine to her work with her more than 25 4-H charges every Saturday morning.

"We have 13 sewing machines," Lila said, explaining that her husband, Ronald, has been unconditionally supportive of her 4-H efforts.

"I couldn't have done it without his support," she said.

LEADERSHIP AT WORK

19th Century Buildings

Street Shirt Factory. It had been converted to apartments in the 1940s and was in rough shape when work began. Said Karen, "The original building was structurally sound including massive oak floor beams, rafters, and maple industrial flooring. Unfortunately, all later work including the apartment conversions had been shoddily done and not maintained. The Main Street location was ideally suited for stores. We gutted the apartments and kept the "up and down stairs" configurations, the factory floors, wainscoated walls and the studding." Now five attractive stores fill this former factory. Ina Stoudt and daughter Jill Zipp-Trait operate "Antique Treasures" from two of the shops selling flamboyant costume jewelry, china, glass, needlework tools and antique quilts gleaned from local auctions and farms. Collene's Crafts owned by Collene Moll sells local crafts including dried flowers, dolls, teddys and quillows (a lap quilt that magically converts to a pillow.) Marilyn Hoppes' shop dazzles the eye with crystals, prisms, pewter figurines, jewelry and ceramics. Mary Nyegaard's Pot Pourri Patch features herbs, herb vinegar, herbal lore and recipe books, dolls, toys and florals. An apartment is planned for space remaining on the second floor. Karen's theory is that a mix of low density commercial and residential uses is most healthy for a small town. There is then always someone coming or going to keep an eye on things. Also, by making small towns economically healthy, restoring their appearance and providing attractive housing, we can lure more people back to the towns and slow the destruction of farmland for housing.

The most unusual building Karen and Barry have rejuvenated is a former wagon makers shop turned Model A Dealership/ garage/gas station across from Haag's Hotel on Main Street. This property is easy to spot: Look for the multicolor antique gas pumps. When was the last time you saw gas for 33.9¢? This sprawling complex also includes a former blacksmith's shop, storage garage and ironmaster's house on the property. The main building houses "Something Special From Laura," a gift shop featuring elegant Victorian style dried and silk flower arrangements (weddings a specialty), dolls, toys, ornaments and a huge antiques shop filled with oak and walnut Victorian furniture, Art Deco enameled top tables with matching chairs, china, glass, tools, sleds, dozens of baskets, primatives, architectural fragments, garden ornaments and walls full of hex signs. The blacksmith's shop and garage are currently under restoration. This peach, lime green, lemon yellow, pale blue and white complex is particularly popular with antique car enthusiasts. They stop on trips to and from the car shows at Hershey and Carlisle, to pose their cars next to the vintage gas pumps at the kind of gas station that is just a memory in most of the country.

Currently Karen, Barry and master carpenter Leon I. Smith who is in charge of construction and maintenance of all the buildings, are restoring a Victorian house on Main Street next to The General Store. This classic brick structure had been stripped of its fancy wooden "gingerbread" trim during a misguided 1950 "remuddling."

The iron posts which were substituted for the original wood posts just did not visually support the old porch roof. "It looked like an attempt to balance an apple on toothpicks," said Karen. Smith replaced the flimsy looking iron with heavy, classic wood posts, installed a railing with massive turned balusters and mounted "ginberbread" trim salvaged from a local house being demolished. A dazzling paint job of pale blue brick trimmed with fuschia, gold, deep blue and white unites the replaced elements. Before and after pictures are startling. Without the elaborate trim, the house looked like a face without features, incomplete. With the intricate woodwork in place and the painting mostly complete, it is elegant. Painting the balance of the house awaits milder weather of Spring.

"These Painted Ladies are decorated only with oil-based paints and the painting season ends in October," says Karen, "I'm so restless in the winter. We work inside on wiring, painting, cleaning, plumbing, running the store, but I'm never happier that when I can paint outside. During painting season, I put out my "open" sign and a note on the door that tells potential customers where to find me: (Come get me, store is open, I'm painting down the street, look for the woman with turquoise, peach and purple paint cans).

It works every time, people can't resist seeing what a woman who lives in a hot pink and vivid purple building is painting now!

Historical preservation and rainbow colors have the village of Shartlesville blooming with color. Painted in vivid purple and hot pink, this quaint 19th century country store brings traffic to a screeching halt.

Berks 4-H'ers

In fact, said Rick Kauffman, 4-H extension agent, the Newhard's built their basement expressly for the club.

"She's really special," he said, noting that Lila had several years of 4-h experience when Kauffman came on the job. "She helped train me."

More than just her boundless enthusiasm, Newhard has a knack for leadership, he said.

"She delegates so well to the kids and the other leaders in a really effective way," Kauffman said. "She motivates other leaders to get things done."

Crawford County 4-H Dairy

Crawford County 4-H Dairy leaders announce that applications for the 4-H Dairy Scholarship Award are now available.

The Dairy leaders have established a scholarship fund from which scholarship awards are made. Eligibility requirements include:

- Applicant must be a member or past member of Crawford County 4-H Dairy and must have been in the program for a minimum of five years. (All five years need not be in Crawford County.)
- Applicant may be currently enrolled or planning to attend a four-year school, two-year school, technical school, short course, breeding school, computer school, etc.
- Applicant must have completed a 4-H Dairy Scholarship Application and be available for a personal interview, which may be conducted at the Scholarship Review Committee's discretion.
- Applicant must be at least a senior in high school.
- Applicant must submit a high school transcript or college grade point average to date.

This scholarship was established to recognize the achievements of Crawford County youth and to encourage their continuing education.

Last year's winners of the $500 scholarship were Dori Alsdorf, Spartansburg; Lori Black, Saegertown; and Dana Slusser, Centerville.

REAL ESTATE AUCTION

78 ACRE FARM!

For The Heirs Of James W. Heaps, Deceased, Late Of 529 Pylesville Rd. (MD. Rt. 165) In The 5th District Of Harford County, MD.

SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1992

On the premises, approx. 8½ mi. northeast of Bel Air via Rt. 543 (Ady Road) from Hickory to Pylesville. Turn left onto Rt. 165 and proceed to first farm on left. Or, approx. 8 mi. northeast of Jarrettsville along MD Rt. 165 (Pylesville Road) to farm on right. Watch for signs at property.

- 10:00 A.M.

REAL ESTATE

Very attractive and desirable farm containing 78 acres m/l. Improved with a large Victorian-style 2 1/2 story farmhouse consisting of 8 rooms and 2 baths, which has been divided into 2 apartments. Further improved with a tenant house of cement block construction with 6 rooms and bath; also a large bank barn, silo, equipment shed and other outbuildings.

This is a very desirable property that is zoned Agricultural, but which has potential for some development. One very favorable feature of this farm is the amount of road frontage on Rt. 165 Pylesville Rd. and Grier Nursery Rd., which bound two sides of the farm, enabling the buyer to market choice building sites along the road frontage, leaving the main body of the farm intact. This property could be ideal as a Gentleman's showplace, a horse farm, truck farm, etc.

INSPECTION: For appointment for a private showing, phone (717) 382-4379. Open House will be held Sunday, March 15th and 22nd from 1:00 to 4:00 P.M.

TERMS: A down-payment of $40,000.00 is required on day of auction in cash, or guaranteed funds with bank letter specifying this auction on this date. Unpaid balance of the gavel price due in-full on or before June 4, 1992 at settlement. Interest of 7 percent will be accrued on the unpaid balance from auction date until settlement. Transfer taxes and documentary stamps shall be paid by the buyers, as is customary. Real estate to be sold as-is, where-is. Additional terms will be available at Open House.

GLU-LAM STRAIGHT BEAMS

MEMBER
NATIONAL FRAME BUILDERS ASSOCIATION INC

Rigidply Rafters laminated beams offer many advantages when building Homes, Schools, Churches and Commercial, Recreational and Agricultural structures. Our beams are available in Industrial, Architectural and Premium Appearance Grades. The rich warm feeling they create enhances any structure.

Laminated beams are superior in all strength characteristics to solid sawn lumber; they resist checking and twisting because of the use of multiple plies of kiln dried lumber, bonded together with phenol-rescorcinal glue.

Rigidply Rafters Inc., has been manufacturing glue laminated products since its initial start up in 1954. We are confident that with our efficient manufacturing plant, team of quality control experts, engineering and sales personnel, we can ensure you a dimensionally stable and dependable product.

We Stock:

- Equus Quality Stall Systems
- Door And Wall Systems
- Grillwork Sections
- Dutch Door Systems
- Plyco Doors And Windows
- Cannonball Track And Acc.
- Fabral Roofing And Siding
- Lumber And Shingles
- All Types Of Fasteners

Since quality is our number one concern, the glue joints are routinely tested in the Rigidply Quality Laboratory for strength and durability.

To better serve you, we offer our beams in a variety of lumber species: Southern Yellow Pine (CCA treated and untreated), Douglas Fir, Poplar and Cedar.

In the final phase of the manufacturing process the beams can be cut, drilled, stained and sealed to your specification. A protective wrapping can be applied to maintain the beauty and quality of the beams during delivery and installation.

Poultry Science

Cannibalism is perhaps the most difficult problem a poultry keeper can face. An outbreak may begin with toe, vent, or feather picking, then develop to a point where several birds are attacked and killed. Once this vice gets started it can be very difficult to stop, and prevention is always the best means of control.

Cannibalism, which can strike birds at any age, seems to be set off by a number of stressful situations, including overcrowding, too much heat, poor ventilation, high light intensity, an excessively long artificially lighted day, inadequate feeder and/or watering space, empty feeders, improper diet, external parasites, and adding new birds to an existing pen — in other words, anything that makes the birds nervous or irritable.

Since the causes are chiefly environmental, attempts at control should begin with a review of the management system. Emergency measures might include:

- Expanding the amount of floor space per bird by moving the flock to new quarters, culling, or if practical, allowing the birds access to an outside yard. Both victims and obvious instigators should be removed from the pen.
- Darken the house to a point where the birds can just see enough to eat, drink, and move about. Provide at least 8 hours of complete darkness each day.
- Feed whole heavy oats in the litter as a scratch grain at the rate of 1-½ pounds per day for every 25 to 30 adult hens.
- Keep the chickens busy by hanging up flakes of high quality legume hay, cabbage heads, or other attractive material at such a height that the birds must jump up slightly to peck at it.
- Common table salt at the rate of one level tablespoon per gallon of drinking water is often effective. It should be used for no more than a day or two, however. Some use it for one half day on two or three successive days.

Other remedies include anti-pick salve applied to at least 25 percent of the flock (both picked and unpicked birds), commercial appliances such as shields or blinders attached to the beak which prevent the birds from seeing straight ahead, and metal bits.

It is not uncommon, however, for the situation to deteriorate to a point where beak trimming becomes the most practical solution. There are commercial devices that will cut and cauterize the beak but beak trimming on a limited scale can be easily accomplished with a good pair of toenail clippers or a sharp knife. Simply remove the tip of the upper mandible to a point about one third of the way back to the nostril. Give the cut a backward slant toward the inside of the mouth. Then shorten the lower mandible to a lesser extent being careful not to cut the bird's tongue.

Owners of breeding flocks should be aware that beak trimming may prevent males from supporting themselves during the mating process so fertility can suffer. Having the beaks of day-old chicks trimmed at the hatchery will usually prevent picking in young birds through the broiler stage. They will probably regain their normal beak at 9 or 10 weeks of age. Game bird breeders "notch" the beak with a hot iron. Remember that the degree or method of beak trimming will affect the bird's eating habits.

It is possible to keep chickens for years and never have a problem with cannibalism. Some experts claim that certain breeds and strains are more prone to this vice than others. But when cannibalism does strike, the results can be devastating if you don't act quickly to stop it.

Poultry Short Course Set

NEWARK, Del. — The 1992 Delmarva Hatchery and Breeder Flock Management Short Course will be held Wednesday, March 25, at the Delmarva Convention Center in Delmar, Md.

The meeting, scheduled for 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., is sponsored by University of Delaware Cooperative Extension, Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc., and the Eastern Shore Hatchery Association.

Registration will begin at 7:30 a.m., when exhibits will be open for viewing. The morning session will start at 8:15 a.m. with a presentation on chick conveyor systems. Other topics include automation in chick processing, what grow-out expects from breeder/hatchery, and management for peak performance.

A panel of experts discussing the future of breeders on Delmarva will complete the morning session. Lunch, which is included in the registration fee, will be from noon until 1 p.m.

The afternoon session will feature motivational speaker Tubby Raymond, head football coach at the university. Presentations on results of the hatchery quality survey, environmental issues and regulations, and worker safety concerns will follow.

Registration is $25. For university, state, and federal employees, the fee is $15. Make checks payable to Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. and send to University of Delaware Research and Education Center, R.D. #2, Box 48, Georgetown, DE 19947. Registration deadline is March 18.

For more information, call extension poultry specialist Dan Palmer at (302) 856-7303.

FARM MANAGEMENT

FARM AND NONFARM RELATIONSHIPS

Alan W. Strock
Farm Management Agent

As the number of farmers and farm employees continues to decline, the relationships between farmers and their rural and urban neighbors may become strained.

The farm population is now only about 1.8 percent of the United States population. This provides many educational opportunities for the farm community. It is critical that all parties try to see the other side of issues where debate may be productive and public policy is involved.

Since agriculture is consolidating in prime resource areas, that is where land is productive, water supply is adequate, and the rural infrastructure is well developed. Thus, there will be increasing competition between agriculture and the public for these limited resources.

This will intensify the discussion on issues such as water quality and use, pesticide use, animal rights and welfare, land use, government payments to farmers, and simply the amount of noise created by farming.

Farmers and nonfarm individuals must learn to discuss their differences rationally, not defensively. Farmers need to create and foster a listening climate for their urban and city neighbors and bridge the potential gap between farmer and consumer.

But the question is often asked, what can farmers collectively and individually do to foster a working and understanding relationship with their neighbors? This is more difficult today, as 30 or 40 years ago just about everyone had an uncle, an aunt, or grandparent that was farming or was raised on a farm and understood production agriculture. This is simply not the case today!

Collectively farm organizations and agribusiness must continue to tell the the farmers' story. It is critical that farmers reach children and youth before they make up their mind concerning farmers. As one farmer said, "They're not only the milk drinkers of today, but the decision-makers of tomorrow."

Preschool, grade, and high school curricula need to be created and aggressively marketed to let the public know that farmers are generally an environmentally responsible group that respects the earth and the animals that they make their living from. A farmer will simply make their operation less profitable by abusing and raping the earth and animal they are stewards over.

Farm groups and agribusiness are already promoting understanding of agriculture to school age youth and their nonfarm neighbors through the ag-in-the-classroom activities, organized farm tours, Farm City Week activities, and the distribution of factual publications concerning animal welfare issues.

There are also numerous activities individual farmers can do to foster a positive relationship with their neighbors. Above all, communications must be stressed, especially neighbor-to-neighbor.

Farmers need to keep and open mind to the public's point of view. When possible, farmers should notify their neighbors when they are going to haul manure or spray and what chemicals they are applying.

Farmers need to always be aware of the general appearance of their farm. As one farmer said, "Our neighbors enjoy looking at a pretty place as much as we do."

Cows wading through mud and manure up to their udder doesn't make anyone thirsty for milk. The smell of freshly hauled pig manure seldom will make a person hungry for ham, either. Whereas, the sweet aroma of freshly mown hay or the picture of cattle or horses on pasture is hard to beat!

Some farmers give their nonfarm neighbors various farm products such as cheese, fruit, vegetables, poultry, pork, beef or lamb products during holiday seasons to show they care and understand their neighbors' concerns.

Farmers must be aware that the sight of a cow freshening outside in bad weather may be considered abusive by some individuals. Hauling downer animals to the stockyards is also a difficult issue. A better solution to downer animals is to have a downer animal purchaser pick up the animal at the farm or have the animal put to sleep.

Farmers individually need to view their neighbors as potential allies and customers. One of Pennsylvania agriculture's greatest strengths is our closeness to markets. Farm markets provide a unique avenue to develop personal friendships and warmth for the farmer and his/her business. Markets can provide their clientele with proagriculture literature and a positive agricultural experience.

In summary, as one farmer said, "If you respect your neighbors, they will respect you."

DAIRY & ANIMAL SCIENCE
E-I-E-I-O
From Dairy and Animal Science at Penn State

Editor's note: If you always thought only farmers work from dawn to dusk, you may enjoy this look at a "typical day" in the life of a professor. Dan Deaver is a physiologist in the departemnt of dairy and animal science at Penn State. His schedule is typical of many of his coworkers. The people he mentions are graduate students and laboratory technicians in the department who work with him on a daily basis.

Daniel R. Deaver
Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science

Saturday, 6:30 p.m.: Aleem and I meet at the dairy barn to prepare a cow for a frequent blood sampling that will begin Sunday morning. We will collect samples every 10 minutes for six hours, then use the samples to study hormones that will cause the development of the cow's ovarian follicle that houses the egg before it is released near the time of heat.

Sunday, 5 a.m.: We begin a day crammed with many activities. It's Aleem's turn for the early morning heat check (Rob is grateful). At 8:30 a.m. I meet him at the dairy barn to make sure everything is ready for the blood collections, then return to my office to update paperwork for the project. While Aleem and Shahab take turns collecting samples from the cows, I visit Kevin in the lab to schedule analysis of the more than 500 samples which must be done very quickly. When the collections are finished at 3 p.m., the graduate students return to the lab to begin processing the blood while Monica checks the cows for heat again. Our day ends at 7 p.m. when Kevin completes the lab work on the blood.

Monday, 7 a.m.: Aleem found two cows in heat this morning, so I need to immediately prepare a new schedule for the week before observing a fellow professor lecture at 8 a.m. Now, in spite of my already full schedule, I have to fit in the unexpected (my wife just called to tell me our 2-year-old daughter has locked herself in the car and I must rescue them). I get back to the campus just in time for class at 8 a.m. The rest of the morning is spent with Jana, administering new treatments to cows in another research project aimed at developing new approaches to heat synchronization. I check with the graduate students at the barns and in the labs. Late afternoon (and a couple of hours after supper) is spent preparing for Tuesday.

Daniel R. Deaver

Tuesday: Daily heat checks, blood collections, and ultrasound procedures are part of every day. I have to deliver a lecture on advanced reproduction for graduate students at 8 a.m. Back at my desk, the rest of the morning is for taking care of business. I find a stack of phone messages. I have to find out why some of our supplies haven't arrived, check on travel arrangements for an upcoming visiting lecturer, and follow up with a company that is sending us samples to analyze. Between phone calls, I write several letters - thank a corporation for its continuing support of my research and confirm that I will guest lecture at a conference in April. At 3 p.m., I deliver a seminar, "Reproductive Physiology — from Animal Agriculture to Space Biology," to a group of undergraduates in the biology department. Before leaving for home, I meet with Shahab to discuss some new results from our research on the regulation of the pituitary gland in Holstein bull calves. I look forward to spending this evening with my wife and daughter.

Wednesday: Standard activities are completed on schedule. Today is necessary for catchup on critical paperwork. This is an ever-present, time-consuming activity for professors. For one thing, the details of every animal experiment must be approved by the university's institutional animal care and use committee. This requires a four- to five-page document that takes several hours to complete. Aleem's research project has been approved by his graduate committee, and I must complete even more paperwork before he can start. Also, students have been appearing at my door all day to register for summer classes. I need to find time this afternoon to prepare for tomorrow morning's lecture (I usually do this after my daughter goes to bed, but tonight I will meet Rob and Aleem at the dairy barn to prepare three cows for sampling in the morning).

Thursday, 7:30 a.m.: I stop at the dairy barn on the way to the office to check on the cows. Jana and Aleem will begin sampling while I teach this morning. Back at the lab, Kevin and Shahab work on 600 more blood samples collected from the bull calves. Kevin is confined to the lab right now because of a sports injury — Murphy's Law is at work! After dinner, we need to prepare yet another cow that was in heat. We should finish by 7 p.m., in time for Aleem to present his seminar on reproduction to interested faculty and students this evening. I should get home by 9 p.m.

Friday: We continue our daily routine and meet to review this week's activities and discuss what next week will bring. We use this time to make adjustments and troubleshoot potential problems. Friday noon, the faculty shares lunch and participates in a departmental seminar which gives graduate students an opportunity to present plans and results of their projects. We all learn from one another in this way, and the students get used to speaking before large groups. From 2-3:30 this afternoon, I attend a semi-monthly faculty meeting. Today we discuss new budget cuts, possible changes in our curriculum, and an upcoming comprehensive review of the department (an extensive process that takes place every five years and requires mountains of paperwork).

I'm never quite sure how to reply when people ask me what I do for a living. If I say, "I'm an animal scientist," they may think I spend all of my time locked in a laboratory with animals and test tubes and microscopes. If I say, "I'm a professor," they usually think I have summers off, leave town right behind the students at spring break, and have little to do besides teach classes and grade exams. Actually, neither is correct.

While lecturing is an important part of a professor's job, we also advise both undergraduate and graduate students and help train tomorrow's scientists. The work we do takes place both in the barns working with the animals and in the laboratory working with samples and data from the animals. A tremendous amount of cooperation and coordination must take place among everyone involved to make our programs succeed — from the barn workers and managers and the office staff who keep the business running to the laboratory technicians and, of course, the students.

Currently, the thrusts of my research range from the control of reproduction in beef and dairy cattle to the effects of space flight on testicular function. And, too, the work we do with animals often provides a basis for understanding human problems. This work is ongoing and depends on the continuing support of industry, government, and the public — especially the farmers we work to serve.

Deadline Nears

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — The Lehigh County Agricultural Land Preservation Board is now accepting applications for the first 1992 funding round of the Lehigh County Agricultural Conservation Easement Program.

Through this program, qualified Lehigh County farmland owners can apply to sell their development rights to the county and Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

To date, the agricultural easement program has preserved five farms in Lehigh County totaling 618 acres.

Applications may be picked up in room 105 of the Lehigh County Agricultural Center, 4184 Dorney Park Road in South Whitehall. The deadline for submitting an application is Tuesday, March 31. Please call Jeff Zehr at (215) 391-9583 for more information.

Skid Loaders Have 1,000-Pound Capacity

WEST BEND, Wis. — Two new 1,000-pound SAE operating capacity skid loaders are now available from Gehl. The Model 3725 features a 35 horsepower gas engine. The Model 3825 features a 33½ horsepower diesel.

Both models have been designed with increased serviceability and greater service life in mind. A redesigned high strength load arm provides reliability in the toughest applications. A gas spring assisted ROPS/FOPS structure provides easy rollback, leaving the engine and driveline fully accessible for maintenance. A tip-back radiator makes it easier to clean the radiator and oil cooler.

New comfort features include a redesigned ROPS for increased overhead and side visibility. The cab is equipped with a larger, more comfortable seat and an optional sound deadening package for quieter operation. Additionally, new monitoring instrumentation provides the operator with instant information on various engine and hydraulic functions.

For more information, contact your local Gehl dealer or write Gehl Company, 143 Water Street, West Bend, WI 53095.

Avoid Corn Injury By Careful Herbicide Management

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Newly registered herbicides, Accent and Beacon, expand growers' grass control options in corn to include johnsongrass and shattercane. But they also expand pesticide management challenges as well.

If planning to use one of these post-emergence herbicides, it's important to avoid applying a granular corn insecticide at planting that could interact with these products and cause damage to corn. An insecticide not compatible with Accent or Beacon can injure corn by causing reduced crop height, deformed leaves, yellowed plants, increased tillers, and even plant death.

Choosing an insecticide that is compatible leaves open the option of using Accent or Beacon for grass control later in the season.

Labels for Accent and Beacon state that neither product should be used in the same season as Counter soil insecticide.

However, there are alternatives. According to Dr. Paul Broth, product development manager at DowElanco, one option is selecting Lorsban™ 15G insecticide. When Lorsban 15G is used, Accent and Beacon can be applied later in the season.

"University research has shown that Lorsban 15G insecticide poses little or no potential of producing a harmful interaction when followed by Beacon or Accent," said Dr. Borth.

One of the reasons for this is that Lorsban 15G is not readily soluble in water and is not typically taken up into the corn plant, said Borth. Some other insecticides are more water soluble and move more easily and quickly up into the plant. Beacon and Accent are also absorbed by the corn plant when they are applied. Thus, a damaging interaction can occur if an insecticide is already present in the plant when Beacon and Accent are applied.

Pesticide compatibility will continue to be an issue. Borth said that, in the future, other new crop protection chemicals will be registered that have modes of action similar to Accent and Beacon.

"We don't expect interaction issues to go away," he said. "It's something growers will need to learn to manage."

Rake-Inverter™ Is PTO Driven

GORDONVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — The Pequea 760 Rake-Inverter™ gently handles all types of hay and forage crops.

The PTO-driven device functions equally at 2 or 12 miles per hour. Features include wide pick-up, wide belt discharge, windrow doubling capacity, or inversion and lay-down. If chopping, the high lift rake design doesn't pick up rocks, eliminating the costly downtime for resharpening rock-damaged knives.

The PTO feature gives the farmer positive control of the way the crop is handled, plus it doesn't depend on ground conditions to determine the way the machine functions.

For more information on the Pequea 760 Rake-Inverter, contact D.M. Skibo, sales manager, Pequea Machine Inc., 3230 East Gordon Rd., Gordonville, PA 17529, (717) 768-3197.

Five John Deere products received the honor in each of the last two years.

Deere Captures Innovation Awards

MOLINE, Ill. — For a second consecutive year, five design innovations developed by John Deere engineers were among the 50 outstanding new developments in technology recognized by "Agricultural Engineering," the magazine of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE).

Among the designs listed as "The Agricultural Engineering 50" for 1991 were a closed handling system for corn soil insecticides (a cooperative effort with American Cyanamid Company, Wayne, N.J.), a sectional combine knife, and a threshing concave grid insert from the John Deere Harvester Works in East Moline, Ill. Also included were the power boost and bulge features of an electronically controlled fuel system from the John Deere Product Engineering Center in Waterloo, Iowa, and the Model 9960 MVP (Most Versatile Picker) cotton picker from the John Deere Des Moines Works in Ankeny, Iowa.

"The AE 50" awards salute technological advances which benefit farmers, processors, and equipment makers by reducing cost, enhancing quality and profitability, and making American agriculture more competitive.

Last year the awards included three designs created at the John Deere Ottumwa Works and two produced by engineers at the Des Moines Works.

Unique this year was recognition of a cooperative effort by engineers at John Deere Harvester Works and at American Cyanamid Company. The effort produced what Cyanamid calls the Lock 'n Load™ closed handling system, which minimizes a farmer's exposure to corn soil insecticides, including Counter® systemic insecticide-nematicide and Thimet® soil and systemic insecticide.

Tips For Spraying Accent

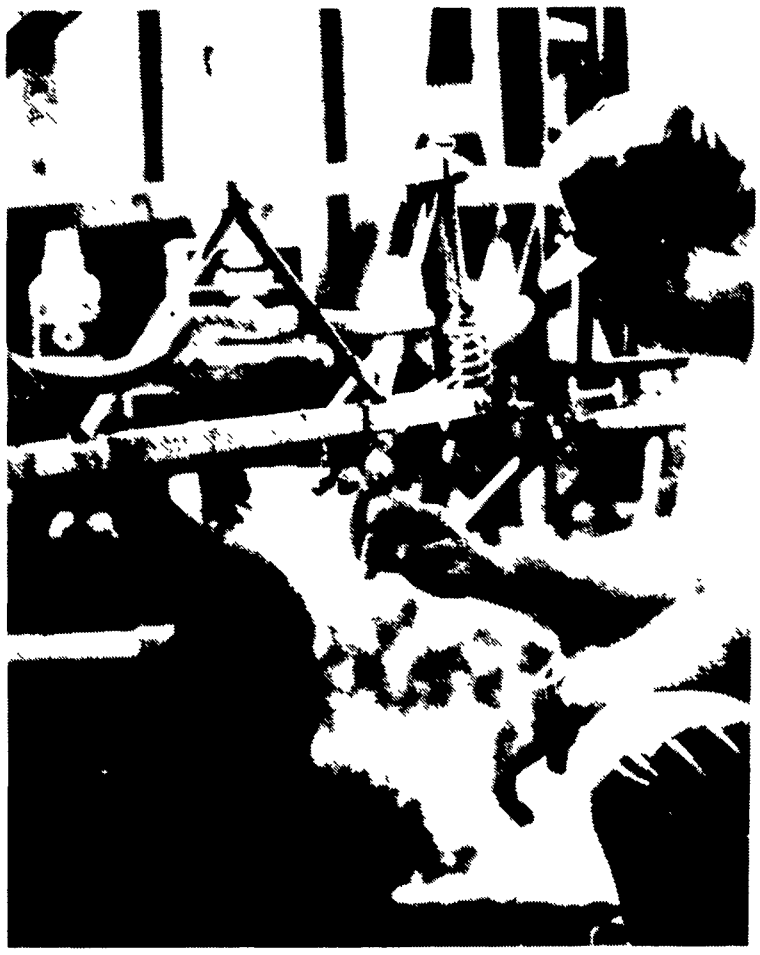
WILMINGTON, Del. — Timely application and proper spraying are all-important for optimum performance of Du Pont "Accent" herbicide for corn.

University extension weed scientists say Accent, a new post grass herbicide, has a high level of crop safety. However, last year, improper application caused herbicide concentrations in the whorl that led, in a few isolated instances, to "pinched" or deformed corn ears.

"Although far less than 1 percent of corn sprayed with Accent in 1991 suffered the pinched ear syndrome, Du Pont has outlined several guidelines to further minimize the risks," said Mike Dobrotka, Accent development manager.

The Accent label recommends that the herbicide not be broadcast-applied when the crop is taller than 24 inches. For corn that is 24 to 36 inches tall, apply Accent with drop nozzles.

For optimum spray distribution, use flat-fan nozzles at 25-40 psi, Dobrotka said. Applicators also should set boom heights at 18 inches above the crop for 80-degree flat nozzles on 20-inch spacings and 27 inches above the crop for 30-inch spacings.



Proper adjustment of sprayer equipment and timely application are important for optimum performance of Du Pont Accent herbicide for corn.

Direct Marketers Present Award

NEWARK, Del. — Mary Fifer Fennemore, secretary/treasurer for Fifer Orchards, Inc., in Wyoming, Del., received an award for her outstanding service to the Delaware Direct Marketing Association and the Delaware farming industry.

The presentation was made at the 10th annual Mid-Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference and Trade Show, held last month in Wilmington.

Fennemore served as president of the Delaware association for three consecutive terms. Under her direction, membership in the group increased substantially. Carl German, chair of the 1992 conference and University of Delaware Cooperative Extension marketing specialist, presented the award.

More than 450 people attended the mid-Atlantic meeting, which was held in Delaware for the second time. The first time the Delaware association played host was 1987.

there is no need to open bags of insecticide, the possibility of insecticide dust blowing onto the user is minimized. And, because the Lock 'n Load™ containers are returnable and refillable, environmental hazards resulting from on-farm disposal of empty insecticide packaging are reduced.

Serviceability advantages earned Harvester Works engineers recognition for the Litening Bolt™ sectional combine knife and the threshing concave quick attach grid insert.

The sectional combine knife, for use on 13- to 30-foot cutting platforms, splits the traditional cutting knives into easily handled sections, making shipment and installation of replacement knives faster and more economical.

The threshing concave quick attach grid inserts for John Deere Maximizer™ combines take only about 15 minutes to install or remove. They allow the operator to tailor a combine for optimum threshing and separating performance. In corn and soybeans, the inserts may be either installed or removed as determined by crop conditions. Normally, the inserts are not used when harvesting small grain.

The engine power boost and bulge features on John Deere Model 9500 and 9600 combines provide performance advantages for farmers. The electronically controlled fuel system delivers up to an extra 13 horsepower when unloading on-the-go, which enables the operator to continue to harvest without substantially reducing ground speed. (For 1992, John Deere has increased the power boost feature on the 260-hp 9600 combine to 25 horsepower.)

In addition, the power bulge feature provides up to 13 more horsepower when engine rpm drops below rated speed for more lugging ability in tough harvest conditions.

Ford New Holland Will Produce Two-Wheel Drive Tractors

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Farm and industrial equipment manufacturer Ford New Holland announced a $10.6-million (Canadian dollars) project to upgrade and retool its Winnipeg, Manitoba plant for the production of two-wheel drive (2WD) Ford-branded 8030 series tractors. The Winnipeg facility, known as the Versatile Farm Equipment Operations, currently designs and manufactures four-wheel-drive and Bidirectional™ tractors.

"It is becoming increasingly important for global-oriented companies such as Ford New Holland to determine where the primary markets are for the individual products it markets, and then to produce those products at plants closer to those primary markets," said Al Rider, vice president of operations for Ford New Holland. He said the 105-170 horsepower 8030 series also would continue being produced in Antwerp, Belgium, predominately for European distribution.

Paul Soubry, general manager of the Winnipeg operations, which is part of Ford New Holland, Canada LTD, said the project would convert the Winnipeg plant into a facility that would substantially diversify its manufacturing operations.

"It will bring in new technology and add the capability and capacity to produce conventional higher horsepower two-wheel and front-wheel assist tractors, in addition to the large four-wheel and Bidirectional™ tractors we now manufacture," said Soubry. By broadening the product line and specializing on tractor production, we will access new markets and offer the company new opportunities for the future."

Canada's Department of Western Economic Diversification will provide a $5.3 million repayable contribution toward the necessary modification of the Winnipeg facility. The department was established to diversify the Western Canadian economy by encouraging new products, new markets, new technology, improved industry-wide competitiveness and import replacement, and to act as an advocate for the West in the national decision-making process.

Versatile Farm Equipment Operations was founded in 1947 by two Toronto entrepreneurs and moved to Winnipeg in 1951. In 1987, the company was acquired by Ford New Holland Inc. In the spring of 1991, Ford New Holland's worldwide operation became part of the newly created London-based N.H. Geotech.

Manure: Asset Or Liability?

NEWARK, Del. — Manure has its pros and cons as part of a farm management system.

Manure is a bonus to farms that produce it and can use it as fertilizer in crop production. But for farms that produce it without a crop base, manure may be a liability, said Bill McGowan, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension agricultural agent.

Nutrient management is a key element in an economically and environmentally sound farm management program.

"Farms that can use manure need to manage it carefully," McGowan said. "One way to evaluate the economic benefits of manure is to calculate the dollar value of the available nutrients."

For example, if manure tests as a 3-3-2 fertilizer, the grower could calculate $10 for 40 pounds of available nitrogen at $.25 per pound, $15 for 60 pounds phosphorus at $.25 per pound, $4.80 for 40 pounds potassium at $.12 per pound, for a total of $29.80 for one ton of manure.

"A nutrient value of $29.80 per ton of manure is not bad," McGowan said. "But every field and manager are different.

"For example, if the phosphorus and potassium values on the soil test for a given field are very high, the dollar value of these nutrients is minimal because the farmer would not purchase them. And this scenario is not unusual."

McGowan said 65 to 70 percent of the soil samples tested at the university are high in phosphorus and potassium. Nitrogen then becomes the only nutrient with an economic value.

Furthermore, if the manure is spread early, only 20 pounds of nitrogen may be available for the crop. The original nutrient value of $29.80 per ton for all nutrients is now $5 per ton for 20 pounds of nitrogen.

"At this level of nutrient value, one could make the case that it's better to park the equipment," McGowan said. "On the other hand, if the goal is to manage manure in the most efficient and environmentally sound manner, the return will certainly justify the handling cost."

The agent notes that every time manure is handled, there is an expense. Clean-out, storage, application, discing, overhead, and management expenses should all be calculated in order to make sound management decisions.

MOVE MORE LIFT MORE DO MORE!

The new L-Series Kubota tractors are designed to finish every light construction job with power, ease and improved working efficiency.

Increased front loader lifting capacities help you move more material and lift heavier loads. A powerful hydraulic system results in shorter cycle times.

You'll also be able to do more with the compact Kubota L-Series – 23-49 PTO HP, tight turning radius and 4WD. And the innovative "Ever-Clutch"– a first-of-a-kind wet clutch that doubles clutch life and even comes with its own warranty.

Demanding construction jobs demand more options. The L-Series has them, including a hefty 3-point hitch, a variety of performance matched implements and industrial tires.

Beef Briefs

John Comerford

Penn State Beef Specialist

THE CALVING KIT

With calves hitting the ground almost daily in most beef herds, it may be time to review the 10 contents of the calving kit.

1. A record book. Not be overlooked, we have to think further ahead and be sure there is an accurate calving record for each cow. This is essential information for all performance programs, and provides the breeder with valuable details about the success of the nutrition and breeding program for the herd.

2. Portable scales. Recording of actual birth weights has become important information for purebred producers in merchandising their cattle and participating in their breed's performance programs. It can also give the commercial breeder insight into the selection of bulls for breeding to specific cows in the herd for next year.

3. Obstetrical chains. Anybody who breeds cattle has to pull a calf on occasion. The chains are the safest and easiest way to get the calf alive without injury to the cow. When asked when a calf should be pulled, I usually answer that I have not seen very many pulled too early, but I have seen several pulled too late. Remember: keep them clean and pull a calf down between the cow's hocks while rotating it through the pelvis.

4. Implants. Volumes of research has shown the value of implanting calves at birth, particularly steer calves. Remember: do not ever implant a bull calf that may be used for breeding and be sure the implant you have is cleared for use in newborn calves.

5. Ear tags. There will never be an easier time for both you and the calf to tag it than when you find it. If for no other reason, they sure are easier to catch!

6. A knife or heavy scissors. For bull calves that are destined to be steers, the least amount of stress in castration will be at a younger age. You can successfully castrate a calf at birth with a little knowledge of testicular tissue. Be sure to use a spray antiseptic that is sprayed directly into the wound.

7. Iodine? There is a question mark because some vets tell us that if the navel is not dipped before the calf ever hits the ground, it will probably be too late. However, it sure won't hurt to dip the navel as soon as the calf is found.

8. A hammer and nails. This is used to nail the barn door shut during calving. The best calving pastures are those wooded areas on a south slope with good drainage. One of the best medicines to prevent calf scours is sunshine. Larger areas are preferable to small lots for calving because the animal concentration contibutes to disease.

9. Esophageal feeder/Gatorade/corn syrup/scour boluses. For the guy who did not nail the barn door shut. The first thing that has to happen after the calf is born is to get some colostrum in it. If scours do occur, mix some Gatorade with ½ cup of corn syrup in 2 quarts of warm water and feed the calf twice a day with the mix. There are a lot of commercial products out there that also do a fine job, including synthetic colostrum. Early attention to the calf will decrease losses from scours.

10. A thermos of coffee or tea. The most important economic factor in the cow-calf business is the production of a live calf. First-calf heifers are usually checked every 2-3 hours during calving season, and older cows about four times nightly. When a cow needs your assistance, she usually needs it now.

Failure to provide timely assistance can cause the loss of both the cow and the calf. Try feeding late in the evening (after 7 p.m.) and you will have many more calves born during the daylight hours.

Feeding Junior Steers

Many junior steer exhibitors are wondering at about this time of year how they should be feeding their steers.

Everybody's case is a little different, but there are a couple of key things to remember.

First, count up the number of days before your show. Secondly, try to get a weight on your steer. Then subtract 40 pounds from the weight. Third, determine how much you think your steer should weigh at the fair. This will vary greatly, but it is more closely determined by the calf's frame size. Ask your leader, ag teacher or county agent to help you.

Then, calculate what the average daily gain should be for your steer between now and the fair by subtracting the desired weight at the fair from today's weight and dividing that number by the number of days until the fair. We subtracted 40 pounds from today's weight because most steers will lose 40 pounds between home and the time you weigh them at the fair.

Using the average daily gain that is needed, you can then figure out the most appropriate ration. The fastest gains will be made with high energy, full-fed diets with a small amount of hay.

Most steers at this stage require a ration that is about 12 percent crude protein. There is no real advantage for feeding more protein that this. These diets will include large amounts of corn, barley, or wheat with less hay, silage, haylage or oats and should be used for steers that must gain more than 2½ pounds per day. Reducing the amount of grain that is fed and/or increasing the fiber in the diet from forages or high-fiber feeds like cottonseed hulls will decrease the gains, yet provide a balanced diet.

Armed with the gain requirement of your steer, consult your county agent, ag teacher, or feed dealer to help you develop the most appropriate ration.

Chester Farmers Elect Officers

WESTTOWN (Chester Co.) — The Chester County Farmers Union elected officers for 1992 at a recent meeting.

"This year's slate of officers provides a new, high-energy spirit for the Chester County farming community," said Robert Junk, president of Pennsylvania Farmers Union (PFU), who presided over the election.

The Chester County Farmers Union, which has more than 300 members, is an affiliate of the statewide Pennsylvania Farmers Union based in Harrisburg.

"The new officers represent a cross section of all farmers in Chester County," said William Harrison, PFU's director of development. "They know the tough issues facing the family farms in this area, and they have the ideas to provide solutions."

The new officers for the Chester County Farmers Union are president, Eva Foster, a poultry producer from Westtown; first vice president/regional vice president, James Balentine, southern Chester County, a steer and hog producer from Oxford; regional vice president, central Chester County, J. Peter Flynn, a dairy and vegetable farmer from Westtown; regional vice president, eastern Chester County, Robert Lange, a fruit, vegetable and grain farmer from Willistown; regional vice president, northern Chester County, former state representative Sam Morris of Pottstown; vice president, county government liaison, Marshall Jones, a farmer from Westtown; and secretary/treasurer, Thomas Foster, attorney from Westtown.

"The most important issue for all farmers in Chester County is holding down taxes, particularly school taxes," said Foster. "Unless something is done to reduce the property tax burden on the farmer very soon, there will be no farmers left in Chester County.

"The second item on our agenda is to examine the effect increasingly regulation is having on the ability of farmers to farm," Foster said. "Federal, state, and local governments are severely limiting the ability of farmers to make a living by issuing a never ending list of regulations on everything from manure management to wetlands. Too many of these regulations simply make no economic sense."

Timber Market Report

This Pennsylvania Timber Market Report gives the prices paid in Pennsylvania for standing timber (stumpage) and for logs delivered to sawmills during July through September, 1991.

This report is intended to serve only as a guide for stumpage and mill prices. Markets for timber often change dramatically, and therefore the past prices reported here may not be representative of current market prices.

The reported prices reflect general market trends and ignore specific timber tract variations. Prices paid for timber on different tracts may vary considerably because price is influenced by many factors, including:

- Size, species, and quality of timber.
- Total volume and volume per acre.
- Logging conditions.
- Distance to the mill.
- Season of the year.
- Market demand.
- End product of manufacture.

Stumpage prices are based on average prices reported by sawmills, pulp and paper companies, forestry consultants, the U.S. Forest Service, and the Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry.

The reported average prices are determined from all data received. Normally we do not report the highest and lowest prices, since these values represent extremes.

The range of stumpage prices reported is based on a statistical measure of dispersion known as the standard deviation (S.D.). A range of prices reported as 1 S.D. on either side of the average contains 66 percent of the reported prices. Mill prices report high, medium, and low prices for delivered logs and correspond to U.S. Forest Service grades F1, F2 and F3, respectively.

The mill prices listed represent the average of prices in each category for the quarter. All prices in this report are based on the International 1/4-inch Log Rule. This report is a reflection of market trends conveyed by the reporters. This report would not be possible without the assistance and information provided by the cooperating sawmills, pulpmills, forestry consultants and agencies. It is funded by the Renewable Resources Extension Act.

The Influence of Shading and Vegetation on the Growth of Oak, Pine, Ash and Poplar

Norman Conrad
Extension Agent
Crops and Soils

The regeneration of trees in old fields or clearings with abundant vegetation is often unsuccessful without intensive control of the vegetation.

There are many areas in Pennsylvania where the understory of a forest is invaded by ferns or grasses following thinning or clearcutting, making successful tree regeneration a problem.

In 1987, a research project was initiated by Drs. Kolb, Bowersox, McCormick and Steiner of Penn State's School of Forestry to investigate the extent of interference effect and shading by ferns and grasses on the germination and growth of four important tree species in Pennsylvania. The term "interference" refers to the detrimental effect one plant has on the growth or reproduction of another plant because it uses up water, nutrients, light or growing space more effectively or due to the release of a harmful chemical into the environment which inhibits other species.

The study was conducted in three recently clearing sites in Rothrock State Forest in Huntingdon County. At each site, seedlings of red oak, white pine, white ash and yellow poplar were planted into 12 environments consisting of different levels of groundcovers in combination with different degrees of shading. The four vegetative environments consisted of areas dominated by hay scented fern, areas dominated by grasses and areas where ferns and grasses were eliminated by herbicide treatment.

The three shade levels (100 percent full sun, 45 percent sun, and 20 percent sun) were created by canopies of shade cloth suspended from above.

The presence of vegetative competition alone by ferns and grasses had no consistent effect on germination of any species of tree. However, shading and vegetative interference together reduced the growth of all four tree species at all levels of shading. Where the ferns and grasses were controlled with herbicides the shading also reduced the growth of a tree species, but had no effect of interference.

Both vegetative competition and shading had greater detrimental effects on white ash and yellow poplar compared to white pine and red oak. The growth of white ash was reduced 78 percent by vegetation and 21 percent by shade while white pine was reduced 14 percent by vegetation and 14 percent by shade.

Eliminating interference from ferns and grasses is essential to achieve the best seedling tree growth of these species. This is especially true for species that are very sensitive to vegetative interference such as white ash and yellow poplar. The influence of shading on seedling growth depends on the degree of other stresses such as vegetative competition. Without competing plants, seedling growth is best in light levels near full sun.

Forest Facts

- The American Tree Farm System is currently made up of 70,000 tree farms covering more than 95 million acres, an area bigger than Japan. Pennsylvania joined the system in 1947 and today has 1,700 tree farms covering almost 900,000 acres.
- Only 17 bird species are capable of making their own nest cavities in trees. Another 80 animal species depend on those previously excavated or natural tree holes for their nests.

Resources

Urban Open Space: An Investment that Pays is a new, 48-page reference on the economic value of urban forests and open space. It is published by The Neighborhood Open Space Coalition, 72 Reade St., New York, NY 10007; the cost is $15.

For those communities searching for the language to protect trees along urban rights-of-way, Municipal Tree Ordinance Manual may be the key to success. The manual was recently revised by the Municipal Arborists and Urban Foresters Society. Two important additions include suggested contract specifications for tree planting, removal, and disposal; and specifications and standards of practice. Available for $25 from International Society of Arboriculture (ISA), P.O. Box 908, Urbana, IL 61801.

How to Identify and Control Noninfectious Diseases of Trees, by Manfred Milke and Michael Ostry, has been revised and is available from: North Central Forest Experiment Station, USDA Forest Service, 1992 Folwell Ave., St. Paul, MN 55108; phone (612) 649-5000.

Dairy Medicine Program Helps Herds

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Twenty-four dairy veterinarians are developing skills needed to help more than 1,200 Pennsylvania farmers get the best results from their herds.

The Dairy Production Medicine Program (DPMP), offered by Penn State and the University of Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine, is helping these veterinarians take a more active role in healthy herd management. Patterned after a similar course at the Ontario Veterinary College in Canada, Pennsylvania's program is unique in the United States.

"Dairy medicine is changing, and this effort is intended to keep Pennsylvania's dairy veterinarians up to date," said Dr. Dale Moore, DPMP coordinator and research assistant in Penn State's veterinary science department.

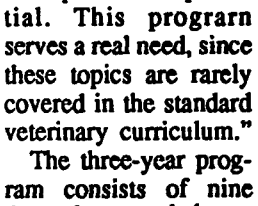
"In the past, farmers called their veterinarians when animals became sick," Moore said. "Today's veterinarians are being asked to devise preventive health management strategies and to help herds meet their production potential. This prograrn serves a real need, since these topics are rarely covered in the standard veterinary curriculum."

The three-year program consists of nine three-day workshops, which feature lectures, hands-on laboratory work, visits to study herds and practical assignments that emphasize problem-solving. Last year's workshops covered herd monitoring and evaluation, reproductive management and epidemiology.

Dairy nutrition is the focus of 1992's first workshop, held this month at Penn's New Bolton Center. "We'll examine the latest information about feeding strategies, body condition scoring, ration evaluation, and metabolic disease problem-solving," Moore said. "Later this spring we'll be taking a more intensive look at herd monitoring and evaluation."

The relationship between the cows' environment and herd health will be covered in 1992's third session. "Veterinarians will study how building design, ventilation, manure handling, bedding, and other factors influence animal welfare," Moore said. "They'll learn to monitor environmental quality and recognize the symptoms of environmental health probiems."

In 1993, the program will focus on mastitis control and milk quality, infectious diseases, and replacement heifers and a comprehensive problem-solving session designed to integrate all the topics covered in the individual sessions.

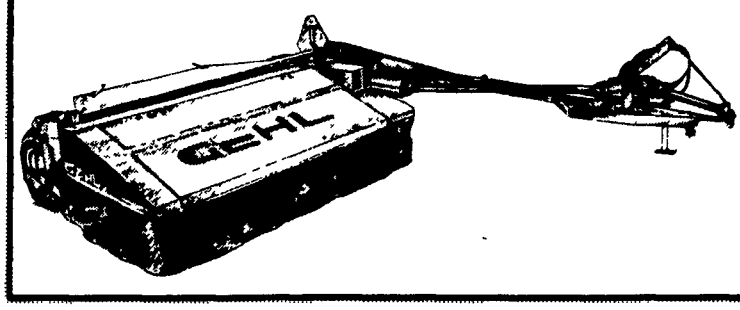


SOMETHING TO CROW ABOUT....

LOW CLASSIFIED RATES WITH EXCELLENT RESULTS!

GEHL

CUT HAY THE DISC WAY!



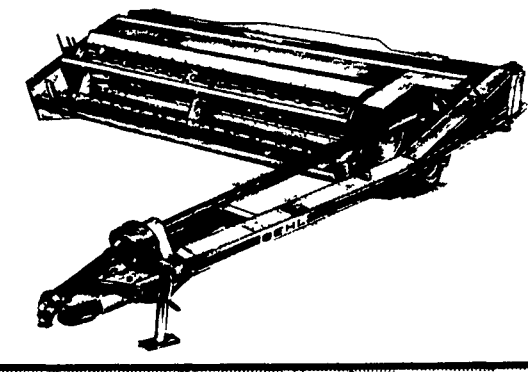
Gehl has two all-new disc mower conditioners to cut your crop down to size, fast and easy. The DC2340 has 7 discs and a 9-foot cutting width; the DC2360 has 8 discs and a 10½ -foot cutting width.

- High speed discs - Each disc has two knives to slice through the toughest crops and conditions; the disc gear drive operates in an oil bath for long life.
- Sturdy frame - Cradles the cutterbar for extra protection and durability.
- 540 or 1,000 rpm driveline with equal-angle hitch for smooth power transfer.
- Standard hydraulic tongue - Makes it easy to position the unit without leaving the tractor seat.

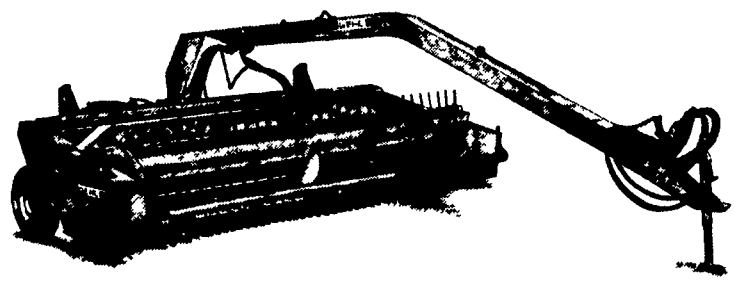
COMMON SENSE MOWER CONDITIONERS

Gehl mower conditioners are "common sense" machines because they're packed with sensible features. Gehl pull-type sicklebar mower conditioners are built to give you fast cutting and conditioning for quick crop dry-down.

- Full-width intermeshing conditioning rolls with intermittent ribs deliver thorough, uniform conditioning.
- Simple sickle drive with pivot-arm design provides more cutting force.
- Fewer moving parts than competitive models for worry-free performance.
- Three-point flotation support protects the cutterbar from rocks and uneven terrain.
- Two models with 7-foot and 9-foot cutting widths available.



CUT BIG HAY FIELDS DOWN TO SIZE!



Gehl swing-frame mower conditioners are designed to cut your biggest hayfields down to size. Gehl swing-frames give you the capacity and maneuverability of a self-propelled mower conditioner at a pull-type price. Gehl also makes conventional sicklebar models as well as disc mower conditioners. The swing-frame units offer:

- Full-width conditioning rolls with intermittent ribs for thorough, uniform conditioning.
- Total hydraulic drive for smooth operation.
- Center-pivot design for excellent maneuverability.
- Three-point flotation support protects the cutterbar from rocks and other field obstructions.
- Easily adjustable for full-width swaths or high-standing windrows.

Seeder/Spreader Holds 600 Pounds

LITCHFIELD, Ill. — The new Model CS-600 broadcast seeder/spreader from Worksaver/Farm Star, is equipped with a cone shaped steel hopper that has a 600-pound load capacity.

Designed for Category 0 and I 3-point hitches, the seeder/spreader can be used to spread seed, fertilizer, and other materials.

Model CS-600 features a heavy-duty 90 degree cast iron gearbox that operates on a 540 PTO and uses a Weasler PTO driveline. A rotating heavy-duty knife-type bottom agitator breaks up clods and provides better material delivery to the unit's gates.

The large diameter spreader provides positive throw of all materials. The free-standing seeder/spreader is easy to connect and disconnect and has a steel tubular main frame that withstands rugged use.

An aggressive rotating rod and wheel agitator that eliminates air pockets and mixes material is optional.

Extension Sponsors Gardening, Nature Classes

GREENSBURG (Westmoreland Co.) — Penn State Extension in Allegheny and Westmoreland counties, along with the Greensburg Garden Center, are cosponsoring a series of garden, landscape, and nature seminars at Franklin Regional High School.

These classes are open to anyone with interest and enthusiasm for gardening and nature. Instructors are Pennsylvanians who are experts on their topics and who understand western Pennsylvania conditions.

Classes will be held on consecutive Wednesday evenings, March 18, 25, and April 1, from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Cost will be $8 per person per evening.

Information and programs are available from Westmoreland County Office, Penn State Extension, Box 250, Greensburg, PA 15601 (412) 837-1402.

Norman Hooven III heads a group of experienced and enthusiastic instructors. He will teach one of the hottest topics in landscape horticulture — the use of ornamental grasses in the landscape. Hooven owns and operates Limerock Ornamental Grasses Inc. of Port Matilda, PA, and an authority on the use of ornamental grasses in Pennsylvania landscapes.

Also on the program will be Dr. Margaret Brittingham, wildlife specialist and professor at the School of Forest Resources, Penn State University. Brittingham will discuss planting the landscape to attract birds and how to identify and enjoy the birds once they arrive.

Martha Oliver, garden book author, lecturer, and co-owner of Primrose Path, Scottdale, will teach how to choose and grow ferns as well as successful and beautiful gardening in the shade.

David Quatchak, Penn State extension agent, Allegheny County, will explain how to avoid problems by choosing the beautiful and low maintenance trees to plant in different landscape situations.

For those who want to grow fresh, healthy produce in the home garden, Westmoreland County extension agent Eric Oesterling will share his experience and insights on growing grapes, berries, and vegetables in Pennsylvania gardens. Herb gardening, roses, and Pennsylvania wildflowers are other topics of interest offered in this series.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregaion, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

A Satisfied Customer...

JOHN R. RODGERS, of Belleville had three styles of fencing installed totaling a mile on his farm. John offers these comments. "I looked at others fencers and determined that Beaver Fence Systems had the people that could do a quality job and a quality fence to keep the cattle where I want them. The flexibility of the fence gives me full utilization of the land with maximum efficiency. The job was completed in two days including a barnyard fence, plus 6 and 4 wire pasture fencing."

that increase growth while improving calving ease.

When they weigh more, they pay more.

Pencil it out for yourself. Despite the premium you get for those lightweight calves, the dollars just aren't there. And it's total dollars that pay the bills.

Simmental sired calves are in demand As top replacement females or as fast-gaining feeders that produce more red meat - less fat.

Why fool around with lightweights? Simmental. More pounds, more dollars.

Approx. 17 Simmental Bulls Will Sell Friday 12:00-Noon

The Eby Wrangler...

★ Better Built
★ Better Value

The Wrangler Model 2000-OH represents a new level of value in livestock trailers.

Its standard specifications, top-quality components and proven engineering are found in other Wrangler models. But the new 2000-OH is less expensive. By standardizing height and width and by limiting the number of optional accessories, Eby lowers the production costs for this model. Now you can get all our traditional craftsmanship in a top-value gooseneck.

Unlike other "budget" trailers on the market, the Wrangler 2000-OH achieves a price breakthrough without compromising quality. Consider these features, standard on the new Wranger 2000-OH:

- 7,000# Dexter Torque-Flex axles
- Steel-belted radial tires, 10-ply rating
- Aerodynamic, attractive design
- Sealed beam lights with enclosed, externally accessible wiring
- 2-year warranty

Specifications

- Available in 14', 16', 18', 20' lengths
- 7' Width
- 6'6" Inside height

Organic Farms Can Be Certified

PORT CLINTON (Schuylkill Co.) — Farmers desiring to have their farms certified by the Organic Crop Improvement Association (OCIA) should move quickly to qualify for the 1992 round of inspections, the president of the state's OCIA Chapter No. 1 announced.

The OCIA, with more than 1,700 certified organic farmers in 10 countries, is the world's largest and best-known certifying agency. OCIA has two chapters in Pennsylvania.

Chapter president Jodi Snyder of Great Bend Organic Farm said the organization is planning to conduct its annual round of farm visits to certify OCIA members in May and early June. About 30 farms were certified in the state last year.

"We're receiving more inquiries than ever before," Snyder said, "and we welcome as members any farmers who are committed to the OCIA principles of farming without synthetic fertilizers and chemical pesticides."

A basic requirement for OCIA certification is that a farm, or the portion of it for which certification is sought, must have been without synthetic fertilizers and chemical pesticides for at least three years. Certified farms must follow rigid standards governing the use of off-farm inputs and must carry out soil improvement programs.

"The guiding principle of the OCIA is soil improvement," Snyder said. "Our chapter is eager to enroll farmers who are interested in moving their operations away from high chemical usage. Once they have converted to a non-chemical approach they can become eligible for certification, which will open their products to new markets."

Snyder said that she and Preston Boop of Mifflinburg, head of the chapter's certification committee, can provide interested farmers with more information on OCIA membership and the requirements for certification.

Certification is available for field, vegetables, and fruit-crop operations as well as livestock and poultry producers, she said. The OCIA also certifies processors, brokers, wholesalers, and retailers who deal in organic foods.

Snyder's address is P.O. Box 158, Port Clinton, PA 19549. Boop can be reached at Briar Patch Organic Farms, R.D. #2, Box 168, Mifflinburg, PA 17844.

"Certification by OCIA can bring important economic benefits to farmers, but there is more to the organization than that," Snyder said. "The OCIA is a self-help organization whose main purpose is to inspire farmers to farm in environmentally sound ways. Improvement of our soils is a centerpiece of this approach."

Mounting consumer demand for food products grown without agricultural chemicals has provided a strong impetus to the organic farming movement here and around the world, Snyder said. Additional impetus is coming from the federal government's new-found interest in farming with less chemicals and synthetic fertilizers — the so-called sustainable agriculture movement.

Snyder said that the OCIA inspection program conducted through Pennsylvania Chapter No. 1 is also open to farmers in Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New York, and New Jersey, which do not yet have OCIA chapters.

"A prerequisite for certification is that a farmer must become a member of our organization," she said. "Once a grower is approved for membership, he or she may then seek certification. We feel that many farms in our area already qualify for certification. Farmers who want to be a part of OCIA are likely to find more reliable and more lucrative markets for their products."

Springer Receives Distinguished Award

HAMMONTON, N.J. — Dr. John "Jack" Springer, extension specialist in plant pathology, Rutgers Cooperative Extension, recently received the Pesticide Association of New Jersey's Distinguished Service Award. Springer was recognized for his outstanding activities in pesticide education.

Springer began his career with Rutgers University Cooperative Extension Service 28 years ago, specializing in fruit and vegetable disease management and control. Later, he also assumed responsibility for field and forage crops.

His research and extension work also included nematode control in these crops. He developed and annually updated the Vegetable Disease Control Recommendations through 1982. To the present, he has also developed and updated the disease and nematode control recommendations for fruit and field and forage crops.

Springer has conducted research on disease and nematode control and has tested thousands of pesticides for their efficacy. The results of his various projects have resulted in approximately 345 publications, as well as speaking engagements with students, farmers, plant pathologists, agricultural professionals, and the agribusiness industry. In addition to these accomplishments, Springer has:

- Developed a management program to increase peach tree life by 10 years in orchards affected with peach decline.
- Discovered soybean cyst nematodes and developed control strategies.
- Developed tests to easily identify and manage fungicide resistance in apples and peaches in New Jersey.
- Developed reduced-rate fungicide control strategies for peaches.

Springer was on the first steering committee of Rutgers Research and Development Center in Bridgeton, and was involved in its development to the research facility it is today.

He has served the Pesticide Association of New Jersey and Rutgers University well by working on numerous committees. Notably, he has served on the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station Pesticide Registration Committee, the USDA/ARS National Soil Fumigation Assessment Committee, and the USDA/ARS Carbofuran Impact Assessment Committee.

In addition, Springer has held many positions in the American Phytopathological Society, Cumberland Shenandoah Fruit Workers, Mid-Atlantic Vegetable Workers, and the Apple and Pear Disease Workers groups. He is also the editor of the publication, the "New Jersey Grower."

Eastern Shore Farmers May Be Eligible For Aid

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — When President George Bush declared a major disaster last month in Delaware because of damages and losses caused by a severe coastal storm, farmers in contiguous counties on Maryland's Eastern Shore also became eligible to apply for loans from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration.

The affected counties in Maryland are Caroline, Dorchester, Queen Anne's, Wicomico, and Worcester.

Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Robert L. Walker urges all farmers in those counties who think they might be eligible to contact the Delaware Office of the Farmers Home Administration, 4611 South Dupont Highway, Box 400, Camden, DE 19934, (302) 697-4305.

All emergency loan applications demonstrating physical and production losses must be in the hands of the Farmers Home Administration by Oct. 6, 1992.

Penn State Establishes Ag Endowment

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Agricultural Safety Council (PASC) has given $12,000 to create a farm safety endowment in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Our purpose in establishing this endowment is to promote agricultural safety and health among the citizens of Pennsylvania," said Robert E. Faubel, PASC president and property staff adjuster at Old Guard Mutual Insurance Company in Lititz.

"This endowment will be used to develop strong linkages for the dissemination of safety information and to promote overall public awareness of the risks associated with farming activities," said Faubel.

The fund will support extension programs, research, and other components of the Agricultural Safety and Health program in Penn State's agricultural and biological engineering department.

"We're delighted to accept this generous gift from the council," said Dr. Lamartine F. Hood, dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences. "This endowment will benefit the entire agricultural community."

"Farming remains one of the most hazardous professions in the nation," said Sam Steel, senior project assistant in the agricultural safety and health program. "Our goal is to raise public awareness of the risks faced by farmers and other agricultural workers. This fund will help us reach more people."

The endowment may support the purchase of a farm safety van, which would transport agricultural safety exhibits and demonstrations to functions ranging from county fairs to extension meetings.

"The van would make it easier to bring those exhibits to a wider audience," Steel said. "Our ultimate goal is to reduce agriculture-related accidents and health problems by making agricultural workers more careful."

One exhibit demonstrates how quickly accidents can occur around power take-off shafts that drive grain elevators and other farm equipment. "This demonstration tests an individual's reaction time, revealing the nearly superhuman speed necessary to avoid serious harm when accidents occur," Steel said. "People leave the exhibit realizing that powered machinery should be treated with caution and respect."

Other exhibits compare various types of respirators and air filters, demonstrate the hazards of improper corn harvester operation, and illustrate how tractor rollovers occur and can be prevented.

To raise additional support, the PASC is offering a limited edition Keystone Farm Safety Tractor model. The collectible model represents a 1967 Allis-Chalmers Model 170, which featured an early version of a factory installed rollover protection structure with seatbelt. Proceeds from the sale of 500 numbered tractors will go to the endowment.

For more information about the model or farm safety issues, contact the Pennsylvania Agricultural Safety Council, 246 Agricultural Engineering Building, University Park, PA 16802, (814) 863-7710.

Critical Area Compliance Increases

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Robert L. Walker recently announced that a survey of the 16 soil conservation districts that represent the state's critical area revealed that 98 percent of farms within 1,000 feet of tidal waters and wetlands are now in compliance with the Chesapeake Bay Critical Area regulations.

This figure shows an increase from 92 percent compliance announced in September 1991.

"I am extremely proud of Maryland farmers. They are doing their part as the traditional stewards of the land to protect the Chesapeake Bay," Walker said.

"Our goal is 100 percent compliance and we are extremely close. We are definitely moving in the right direction," said Walker.

The Chesapeake Bay Critical Area Law requires all agricultural land in the "Critical Area" to have a soil conservation and water quality plans by which it is managed. Farmers receive technical assistance from local conservation districts to develop these plans that recommend site specific best management practices for resource protection.

"The soil conservation districts are to be complimented for providing farmers with the technical assistance required to protect these all important critical areas. These districts do a tremendous job in helping farmers preserve our state's essential land and water resources," Walker said.

For more information on agricultural programs to protect the Chesapeake Bay, contact the Maryland Department of Agriculture, Office of Resource Conservation, 50 Harry S. Truman Parkway, Annapolis, MD 21401, Telephone (410) 841-5865.

Take A Look At Dairy Refund Procedures

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Recently announced changes in dairy assessment refund procedures should prompt a "second look" from dairy farmers, according to a leader of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA).

Harold Shaulis, Jr., a member of PFA's board of directors and chairman of PFA's dairy advisory committee, said, "USDA regulations will now permit refunds for dairy operations which were previously ineligible because another person was added to or removed from the operation."

Dairy producers were assessed five cents per hundredweight (cwt.) of milk sold in 1991 as part of the Budget Reconciliation Act. Farmers who sold the same amount or less milk in 1991 than they did in 1990 are eligible for a refund. They must have milk receipts to verify their claim. Refund applications are currently being taken at county ASCS offices.

Under the revised rules, adding or removing persons to those shown as marketing milk for commercial purposes from the dairy unit will not be considered a change in operation if the persons being added or removed do not have their own dairy cows.

Exceptions are allowed for children with 4-H or FFA dairy projects or two individual dairy producers who marry during the base or refund period and combine their operations.

In addition, a transfer of milk marketing history will be permitted if all the dairy cattle and equipment are transferred to a family member. Transfer of the land which provided feed for the dairy operation and the dairy facility is no longer a requirement for a transfer of milk marketing history to occur.

Shaulis urged dairy farmers to contact their local ASCS office if they had not applied or been disapproved because of the previous policy. According to USDA, the deadline to file a signed application is March 16.

BALING THAT'S FAST, VERSATILE AND TROUBLE-FREE

Want to put more tight, weather-resistant bales behind your baler by day's end? Then check out the four new 8400 Series Round Balers from Case IH. There's a model designed to fit your needs, no matter the size of your operation or the material you're baling. They each feature direct feed into an open-throat chamber, and aggressive bale starting action. So every bale starts right and builds right . . . to stay tight and fresh until you need it. And an audible alert tells you when each bale is done and ready for wrapping.

SEE BINKLEY & HURST BROS. INC. FOR ALL YOUR DUAL WHEEL NEEDS PLUS A COMPLETE LINE OF HARDWARE

Operating Guidelines

As in all dual wheel applications, Snap-On duals should be maintained at lower air pressure than the original tractor tires.

To remove Snap-On duals, simply position one clamp at top center and remove all other clamps. Then, using the furnished handle for additional leverage, disengage the remaining clamp to loosen the dual.

Ductile iron clamps feature an innovative foot design which eliminates bending and loosening of the components by applying the support load to the rim rather than to the rail.

NEW ARRIVAL! SPECIAL EDITION

International Famous Engine 1/8 Scale

International Harvester first began producing vertical gasoline engines in 1905 which single-handedly brought inexpensive, reliable power to American farms. Gasoline engines were available in 2, 3 and 5 horsepower.

FOR ROCK PICKERS & ROCK RAKES IN HEAVY DUTY QUALITY SEE BINKLEY & HURST BROS. INC. TODAY!

ROCK PICKERS

Hi-Lift
The Hi-Lift makes field piling and the removal of rocks by truck simple and effortless

Semi-Hi
A hardworking reel type picker ideal for field piling. Picks gravel-size stones to boulders in continuous picking action, then dumps them conveniently and easily.

Prong Type

ROCK RAKE

The Degelman Rock Rake is designed to windrow small to medium sized rocks and other ground debris for easy picking. Rock-free fields mean less down-time, greater profits.

TIME IS MONEY

and when your equipment is down, it costs you plenty. That's why Degelman engineered farm implements are a wise investment.

BINKLEY & HURST BROS., INC. HAS ALL YOUR HEAVY DUTY TILLAGE NEEDS!

Don't Overlook The New Tillage Industry Leader When Buying Any New Tillage!

SUNFLOWER SUPERIORITY — PROVIDES THE QUALITY YOU DEMAND

TAKE A LOOK!

Gauge Wheels A trademark on all flexible Sunflower discs is front mounted gauge wheels. This important feature prevents the front gangs of the wing frame from gouging, buckling or cutting deeper than the other gangs, promoting a level, ridge or furrow-free field. The heavy-duty gauge wheel features a 5-bolt hub and 8.00x10 ply tire and tube.

DOUBLE OFFSET DESIGN

Eliminates center ridging while cutting the entire width at an even depth. Self-leveling hitch provides fore & aft leveling at any working depth.

GANG CONSTRUCTION

¼ "x24" or 22" Blades are available on 1¼ " stress proof standard gang shafts. Gangs are hydraulically torgued to 1200+ lbs. and are spring loaded to insure maximum trouble-free acres. Heavy duty scrapers complete the gang assembly making it truly SUNFLOWER SUPERIOR.

WHY BUY A SUNFLOWER DISC HARROW?

The Reasons Are Obvious!
Sizes From 10'-15' And 18'-32' Folding

Check Out The Rest - Then Buy The Best! SUNFLOWER

TRANSPORT WIDTH On Wing Units Up To 24'2" Working Width Is A SAFE 12'4".

3 YEAR WARRANTY On Triple Lip Sealed Trunnion Mounted, Regreasable BEARINGS

WING GAUGE WHEELS Eliminate Gouging

BLADES: ¼ "x22" or ¼ "x24" On 8.5" Spacing 3 Sided Blade Prevents Erosion By Eliminating A Continuous Furrow

Your Choice Of RIGID or C-FLEX BEARING STANDARDS.

HEAVIEST AXLE SHAFTS In The Industry - 1¼ " Dia. Gangs Are Hydraulically Torqued To 1400 Lbs. & Spring-Loaded To Eliminate Loosening, Wear And Breakage.

DOUBLE OFFSET DESIGN Provides Maximum Leveling Without A Middle Buster Or Center Tooth

SELF-LEVELING HITCH Maintains Level Setting Regardless Of Desired Depth Or Tillage Application

Strong Sunflower Resale At Farm Auctions Is A Sign That Sunflower Has What Farmers Are Looking For - And Is Just Another Good Reason Why More Farmers Are Switching To Sunflower Than To Any Other Brand!

GET A SUPER TAX DEDUCTIBLE LEASE ON QUALITY SUNFLOWER TILLAGE EQUIPMENT

WHEN IT COMES TO WORKING ON ROCKS...
WHEN IT COMES TO RESALE...
WHEN IT COMES TO WEIGHT...
WHEN IT COMES TO CUSTOMER EXCEPTANCE & REPEAT SALES...

TRANSPORT WIDTH

Go from field working to highway transport in seconds. Transport width on 18'-21'-24' units are only 12'4" barely the width of your dual wheels, leaving plenty of room for traffic to pass. Transport height is within legal limits.

SUNFLOWER Series 6000 LAND FINISHER

The RIGHT combination in one-pass tillage. The New Sunflower 6000 Series Land Finisher performs three operations in one pass. It discs, cultivates, and finishes the seedbed all at once.

Working widths from 13 to 37 feet.

FREE YOURSELF FROM SPREADER CHAINS AND SAVE MONEY

The proven Hydra-Spread design can free you from the grief and maintenance of spreader apron chains for good!

This low maintenance spreader features solid poly boards both on the sides and the floor for slippery, no-stick performance. Hydraulic push power replaces the extensive mechanism needed in ordinary spreaders.'

Why pay more for yesterday's ideas and designs? The design of tomorrow is PRICED RIGHT and will be on the job for years. We deliver to your farm.

WINCO PTO GENERATORS

Power fails at the worst possible time—restart your whole farm with the number one PTO generator the world over!

ENERGX Corporation, the world's largest PTO generator manufacturer, designs Winco PTO units from the ground up for farm standby power. Built to handle motor loads for the duration of the power outage, and rated for continuous duty operation.

Big motors in your feed room groan to a halt. Vent fans, milk coolers stop There are no lights, no heating, and no power in the house. For how long? Nobody knows! But with a Winco PTO generator, your farm will be back in business in minutes.

Winco PTO generators are available in sizes from 8KW to 75KW continuous duty. The Maxi-Watt® field coil windings provide extra capacity to restart a big farm at the busiest time of the day.

Winco PTO units will run a combination motor load of up to 1 HP per KW

Reproduction, Nutrition Highlight Dairy Day II

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The highest producing cows in the herd may not be the best reproducers, and can be a financial drain, according to a Pennsylvania State University dairy reproduction specialist.

Michael O'Conner, PhD, talked about nutrition, body condition and reproduction and new concepts and management techniques in dairy cattle reproduction, during the second day of Lancaster County's Dairy Days program, held Tuesday at the county Farm and Home Center.

O'Conner also disclosed some early findings from cow reproductive research that may change the way the industry conducts cattle-reproductive practices.

Also speaking about reproduction during the day-long seminar was Steven Milliken, a veterinarian with Reproductive Associates.

Other guest speakers included Dr. Larry Chase, an associate professor of animal science at Cornell University, who discussed feeding strategies to stimulate beneficial rumen microbial activity for milk and milk component production.

Also, a panel of area dairymen gave testimony as to the effects of feeding a totally mixed ration to their herds.

In discussing nutrition and how it relates to reproduction, O'Conner said that research has shown that the amount of weight loss a cow experiences during lactation directly relates to the amount of time it takes for that cow to begin showing heats.

O'Conner said that it should be the goal of a dairy producer to get his cows bred back as soon as possible after calving.

The problem in achieving that occurs with some of the high producers which go into a severe or extended "negative energy balance" during lactation.

A negative energy balance is the condition in which a cow uses more energy to make milk than she is eating. In other words, her body uses it's own reserves to make milk.

All cows go into a negative energy balance at the onset of lactation. However, some maintain a negative balance far into lactation.

The latter are the problem, when it comes to breeding them back.

The assumption is that the cause for extended or severe negative energy balance is not a natural trait of that particular animal, but outside factors — poor feed, not enough feed, improper balancing of diet, disease, etc.

According to O'Conner, the quicker a cow recovers from the early lactation weight-loss, the quicker she will begin cycling, showing heats, and become ready to become pregnant.

The recovery from energy loss to equilibrium is important.

Equilibrium is that state in which the amount of energy a cow takes in equals the amount of energy needed to maintain its functions and body weight. On a graph, it is not the point of beginning recovery, but that point in which the cow is maintaining a steady condition of intake equals need.

In comparing the body condition loss from the time of calving to first service conception, a number of cows were catagorized into three groups — those that lost minimal condition, those that lost a

Farm Couple In New Jersey Has Many Memories

Henry and Ann Trout, have farmed near Asbury, N.J. for nearly 60 years. They will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary on March 29.

Editor's Note: This farm feature story, written by Laura England, appeared in the Atlantic Dairy Cooperative magazine for February 1992. It is reprinted here by permission.

ASBURY, N.J.—Henry and Ann Trout's eyes light up and their voices sparkle when they talk about their grandchildren. Holding a news clipping in her hand, Ann announces that granddaughter Cara Regitz won first prize for her sweater at the Pennsylvania Farm Show. This is the second consecutive "Best of Show" honor for the 16-year-old, says the proud grandmother.

Ann's nimble fingers sort through several other news clippings and articles spread out on the kitchen table. She picks up an essay written a year ago by Cara's older brother, Clark. The essay (see side bar) gives a glowing account of a person in my life, grandfather Henry. It is a tribute that the Trouts hold onto dearly.

The stories of the grandchildren continue. Henry recalls an amusing Atlantic Dairy Cooperative/ February 1992 story about grandson Neil Regitz. Many years ago, the then youngster was traveling to Iowa by train. Before the train pulled out of the station, Neil had managed to jump on and off three times. The reason? He didn't want to leave without his "grandpap."

Stories of the other grandchildren — Eric, Doug and Elaine Shoemaker, Craig Regitz and John Pawoloski — flow gently across the lips of their proud grandparents. The memories are part of the legacy that Henry, 82, and Ann, 77, have built on their Asbury, N.J., farm. A legacy that spans nearly 60 years.

The Early Years

Ann was an 18-year-old farmer's daughter and Henry a 23-year-old farmer when they married in 1932. Henry had begun farming three years earlier. He had purchased the 20 cows he was milking by hand with a $500 bank loan.

In those early years, Henry and Ann shipped their milk to Port Mary Dairy Company. They received between $2 to $3 per hundredweight for their milk, a price that Ann says "wouldn't get you to first base today." Of course, Henry adds, other prices were down, too.

Calves sold for $25 apiece, and "we thought that was a good price," Ann says. "Cows went for $300. Now, they sell for $1,650 per cow."

Farm Couple In New Jersey

example of the changing times. Henry and Ann also note the advances in technology that helped make farm chores less la- borious. Milking by hand soon turned to milking with buckets. A pipeline installed in 1948, plus a new barn, brought the Trouts to modern times.

The memories live on. "We pitched hay by hand and cut wheat with a binder," Ann recalls. Henry fondly remembers his team of horses, Jake and Lena. "They were good," he says. "You could let them stand in the field and they would stay there."

But life was not always filled with happy times. Ann speaks of the day that nearly cost Henry his life. The young farmer had stepped over a belt to start the old thrashing machine. The whirling strap caught his overalls and began pulling him toward the feeding arms. Ann appeared just in time, and "little me, all of 100 pounds, pulled him out," she says.

These are just some of the memories Henry and Ann store in their hearts. They are part of the fuel that has kept them going all these years in a livelihood they wouldn't trade for anything.

Farmers at Heart

When asked why, at their ages, they continue to farm, Ann answers: "others say to us, 'Why not get rid of those cows and start living?'" She tells them, "We like the farm. We like what we're doing."

What they are doing is this. Henry twice daily milks the 50-cow herd while son Henry Jr. manages the 200 acres of farmland. Ann "raises the animals" and helps carry the milking equipment into the barn. She doesn't milk, she explains, because with her petite size, she can't reach the pipeline.

Ann makes up for the milking chore by spending endless hours in her garden — one that the county agent has said "is the nicest he's seen." Her half-acre plot this past summer provided her with enough vegetables and fruits to fill three freezers. Her canned vegetables earned her "a lot of first prizes at the fair."

Henry has had his share of accolades, too. In 1988, at the age of 78, he was named Warren County's Farmer of the Year. Henry smiles, "The county agent says I'm just it, there's no one like me."

The Trouts say they are blessed with good health, a reward from "eating right and living right."

Farm Couple

They enjoy square dancing, round dancing and an occasional ride on the snowmobile.

To keep his health in check, Henry visits a chiropractor and takes one sugar pill daily. He also stays away from sweets and doesn't use extra sugar.

Another key to longevity, according to Ann, is kindness. "You experience a lot of things (in life)," she says. "Always try to help everyone and be kind to people."

Grandson's Tribute

The one person in my life that especially stands out would have to be my grandfather. Jeremiah Henry Trout, known to his peers as "Henry," was born on January 19, 1910. On March 29, 1932, he married Juila Ann Becker. Together they raised four children, the youngest one being my mother, Harriet. My grandparents still live on the same farm in Asbury, New Jersey.

This man is the symbol of courage and perseverance. In 1932 he stepped out on a limb and borrowed $500 to start farming. This money was used for the purchase of a few cows and some farm machinery. Today, at the age of 80, he milks 60 cows twice a day and farms 200 acres.

My grandfather always has a smile to give and a joke to tell. There is never a dull moment when I go to visit him. Patience is one of his strong qualities, always having time for everyone. His stories of days past are the absolute best. In the '20s he was part of a group that sang, danced, and played music. He played the violin for the group. He also remembers the advent of the airplane, automobile, electricity, and indoor plumbing. Even though he only had an eighth grade education he is very knowledgeable in history, mathematics, and politics, which he takes very seriously.

It is for these qualities that I have great admiration for my grandfather. He is an entrepreneur, musician, farmer, storyteller, politician, and historian all rolled up into one man. My goals in life are to be as influential and as successful as my grandfather has been.

USDA Announces Burley Assessment

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture today announced a no-net-cost assessment of .351 cents per pound for the 1992 crop of burley tobacco.

Keith Bjerke, executive vice president of USDA's Commodity Credit Corporation, said the no-net-cost assessment is in addition to the marketing assessment of 1.649 cents per pound required by the 1990 farm bill.

The no-net-cost assessment, plus the 1992 marketing assessment, means that 2 cents will be collected on each pound of burley tobacco marketed from the 1992 crop. The assessments will be shared equally between producers and purchasers with each paying 1 cent per pound.

Funds in the no-net-cost tobacco account ensure that the price support program for burley tobacco hill be operated at no-net-cost to taxpayers, as required by the No-Net-Cost Tobacco Program Act of 1982.

CCC consulted with the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association and the Burley Stabilization Corporation, the producer-owned associations through which price support is made available for burley tobacco, before reaching a final determination.

PRUA Meeting Gives Perspective Of Animal Care

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — What constitutes animal use and abuse continues to be a matter of personal perception, according to opinions aired during an annual meeting of the Pennsylvanians For the Responsible Use of Animals (PRUA), held last Friday in the state agriculture building in Harrisburg.

Morning and afternoon guest speakers, followed by a panel discussion, constituted the format for the annual meeting.

Most members of the organization and those who attended were pro-use of animals as pets and in food and fiber production, but there were also representatives of other animal-use industries and recreation.

The goal of the annual meetings is to share current perceptions and realities of animal use and animal welfare, and consider what directions are to be taken to present the factual side of animal use to the public and within the industry.

During last week's meeting, a variety of perceptions were expressed about the use of animals, among members as well as among the general public.

Some of the presentations were repetitive of information presented in previous years, or elsewhere, while others provoked new discussion.

What seemed to result in agreement is: that few people have a true understanding of all the animal-use industries and how those animals are actually treated; and also that abusing commercial animals results in poor financial return, thus there is already a built-in incentive for treating production animals well.

The problem of dealing with ill or dead animals was highlighted as one of the issues that will require more attention.

Also, an issue that hasn't seriously been addressed is the difference in treatment of animals depending on their use, and also the difference in veterinary care afforded animals.

According to John Simms, VMD, MS, of Burnt Mill Veterinary Center in Shippensburg, the role of veterinary care has changed significantly.

He said the role of the veterinarian has been extended to disease prevention health care, especially with production animals. He said the care strategy has changed from a "fire truck" service for individual animals to taking into account herd health and making health decisions based on the owner's and herd's needs, rather than one animal.

It doesn't result in less care for any animal, but can result in the decision to remove animals that may have otherwise lingered around the herd, possibly threatening the health of other animals and draining the income of the herd owner.

Also, Simms said that there is greater range in client requests for care for their animals. He said that depending on the owner, some animal species, such as cats, depending on the niche that they fill in their symbiotic living with humans, can be rat catchers, pests or beloved pets.

From the left, the morning panel discussion group of the Pennsylvanians for the Responsible Use of Animals (PRUA) is comprised of Adele Douglas with the American Humane Association; H. Clay Criswell, executive director of the Humane Society of Harrisburg; Dr. H. Rozmiarek, director of laboratory animals at the University of Pennsylvania; Peter Duncan, executive director of the Pennsylvania Game Commission, who is responding to a question; and Lowell Wilson, with the Department of Dairy and Animal Science at Pennsylvania State University.

Similarly, other animal species fill almost as wide, if not a wider variety of roles in their association with man, such as horses. Individual prized race horse may receive much more intensive, and costly medical care, while others with similar health problems might be euthenized.

Thus, members of each species are treated differently with respect to the particular role they fill.

Simms, who sits on the boards of several different agriculture agencies, and also with the Humane Society, did not say that those animals which receive less care than another member of that species are being mistreated.

Instead, Simms indicated that some animals are receiving far more additional care than normal judgement calls for, because of the affluence of the owner or because of the owner's mental attatchment to that particular animal.

He did discuss mistreatment, however.

While not defining mistreatment in specific terms, Simms said there is a difference between mistreatment and use.

BARN PAINTING
SPRAY & BRUSHING

To farm building owners —
Under today's farm economy it is time to reduce maintenance frustrations.

Do you remember of hearing of barn painting of approximately 75 years ago that it stayed nice longer? lasted 25 years?

Observation #1 In recent years many of these good old barn surfaces have been ruined by overcoating, poor preparation and application, lack of controlled paint placement and film thickness. The time is coming to salvage our buildings (a) Start over (b) Water blast (c) RESURFACE (d) Use solid stain to penetrate on bare spots! (e) Second coat with a breathing film thickness (f) Brush out in all directions with finest of bristles.

Really it is not as complicated as the recent changing regulations on clean milk production, or wet soils, or zoning. It is also less expensive than other barn painting experiences!

Observation #2 Colored water (latex) is less desirable for farm buildings. There is a long list of reasons for this.

Observation #3 Todays painted metal siding and roofing has a remarkably short life. Bad alloy or metal. There might be another list of reascns for this. To save it at reasonable coating cost - timing is important.

Observation #4 Today's wood selection for siding etc. is also poor. How about recycling building material?

fair amount of condition and those that lost a severe amount of condition.

The study showed that those cows which lost the least amount of condition remained "open" only about half the number of days as the severe-loss group.

Also, the group which had the least loss had a 65 percent first service success rate as compared to a 17 percent rate for the severe group.

Another study divided cows into three groups for comparisons — the first group had 40 days or less to first heat following freshening (calving); the second group showed a first heat between 40 and 60 days; while the third group did not show any heats within 60 days.

A comparision of cows showed that the average weight of the first group of cows was about 1,357 pounds. The third group weighed about 10 percent less, or 1,232 pounds.

The amount of dry matter intake in pounds for the first group was 41.4 pounds. The third group had a daily dry matter intake of 33.4 pounds, which is 20 percent less.

The third group, however, made at least 15 percent less fat corrected milk and used an estimated average of 28 percent of their body weight to manufacture the milk.

The first group only used 16 percent of their body weight to make milk.

While it might appear that a third-group-cow may be more efficient and profitable because they did not eat as much during lactation for the amount of milk given, they are far and away more expensive to own primarily because of the lack of reproduction, and that weight has to be put back on.

But with such a severe loss in condition, the door is open to a host of other problems.

O'Conner said what it points to is the importance of body scoring regularly throughout lactation.

Many dairy producers have said they do not bother to body score often, if at all, because they know their cows well, and they can tell when the cows are slipping weight.

However, it has been shown that an individual's perception of change can be poor, especially if that person is frequently around the object that is undergoing change.

Body scoring is a technique for getting the most objective eyeball analysis of change in the animal.

O'Conner said he tries to emphasize the usefullness of the technique and that it is catching on by some of the more profitable producers.

With reproduction being affected so drastically by changes in energy balance, O'Conner said body scoring is especially important during the first nine weeks of lactation.

What producers should look for is the rate of change, although O'Conner didn't provided guidelines for what level of body condition change would constitute a red flag.

The reasons for excessive loss of body score could be attributed to a number of situations, O'Conner said, some of the prominent being disease, lameness, low dry matter intake, crowded bunks, poor quality forages, a low energy diet, excessive rumen degradable protein, and improper feeding management.

Another aspect of reproduction and nutrition is the relationship between rumen degradable protein and reproductive success.

O'Conner said research results have been conflicting on the issue, but that he sees evidence in the data that suggests a negative effect on reproduction with an excess of degradable protein in the diet.

Microbes in the rumen feed on protein and carbohydrates and break them down into materials the cow can use.

However, excessive degradable protein can create an increase in the amount of ammonia in the cow, which has to be detoxified by the animal. It can lead to a decreased pH in the rumen, in the blood and ultimately in the uterus and perhaps affect the viability and normal function of cells, such as those within the reproductive organs, he said.

(Furthermore, excessive protein diets in growing heifers and young cows have been linked to laminitis, which not only decreases the utility of the animal, but is believed to decrease that animal's willingness to displays heats.)

He said that older cows seem more susceptible to ammonia toxicity. He added that, though unknown, it's possible younger cows aren't as susceptible to ammonia toxicity and lowering pH because they are still growing and the nitrogen-based molecules are being used by the cow for growth.

Two types of farms are regularly found to have experienced problems with ammonia toxicity — those which feed silages only to cattle and those which feed a high protein alfalfa in addition to high protein feeds, O'Conner said.

Up To Your Ears
In Triazine-Resistant Weeds?

Dairy Day II

Dairy producers who suspect that their herds are being fed excessive degradable protein can test the blood for levels of urea nitrogen, though it is extremely important when blood samples are taken.

O'Conner said he recommends not taking blood for these tests for at least four hours after the cow has received its major meal for the day.

In other areas of dietary concerns to reproduction, the role of beta carotene seems shaky.

While O'Conner said that the corpus luteum is rich in beta carotene, and beta carotene is broken down into the necessary Vitamin A, he said he could find no conclusive evidence to support feeding beta carotene as a dietary supplement.

O'Conner said that as long as the forages were of adequate quality, there should not be a lack of beta carotene in a cow's diet. However, he said there may be some farms where levels are not adequate and supplemental feeding may help.

(He said it did increase hog health when fed as a supplement.)

A blood test is available to determine whether beta carotene levels are adequate.

Selenium is a trace mineral important to the proper physiological function of a cow, O'Conner said. It is involved in the formation of antibodies and improves the ability of white blood cells to fight disease and helps increase the smooth muscle contractions, especially in the uterus.

The levels of selenium are set by regulation, though O'Conner said it would takes ingestion of 10 times the recommended levels to cause toxicity.

New Thoughts

O'Conner also gave a talk on new and basic conepts in reproductive management, focusing on new findings that strongly suggest that the estrous cycle of a cow is not as simple as once thought.

O'Conner showed a slide of a growing follice and a corpus luteum both at the same time, which isn't supposed to occur under the old theory of a 21-day cycle.

He said a range of 18 to 24 days has been recorded and is now explainable.

What has become apparant is that while the corpus luteum may cycle regularly, there are subcycles of follicle growth occuring simultaneously.

He said this discovery goes a long way to explaining some of the discrepencies in activity which occur in studies concerning the effects of prostaglandin and others aspects of reproduction, such as determining stage of cycle by palpating.

What it means is that efforts are going to be put foward on further studying this subcycling in an attempt to increase reproduction of cattle.

In the meantime, it helps allow for understanding some of the delays in getting cows to respond.

Tri-County Agronomy School

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — The cooperative extension offices of Dauphin, Northumberland, and Schuylkill counties will present an Agronomy School for field crop producers on Wednesday, March 18 from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m., at the Gratz Fire House in Gratz.

Topics of interest include an update on a proposed nutrient management bill by Paul Craig, extension agent; weed control strategies following the drought of 1991, by Bill Curran; corn rootworm control strategies, by Dennis Calvin; cropping strategies for hedging periods of environmental stress, by Allan Shoener; soil fertility and corn diseases, by Norman Conrad.

This meeting qualifies for pesticide training credits.

There is a $5 lunch/registration fee. To register contact the Dauphin County Cooperative Extension Office at (717) 921-8803 before Thursday, March 12, 1992.

"Mistreatment of animals can come in many forms," Simms said. "A subject that continuously must be dealt with is that of drug use. Over 90 percent of the drugs used in food animals in this country are sold without a veterinarian being involved in the loop.

"Misdiagnosis and improper dosage, withholding times, and route of administration has lead to a residue proliferation that has gained the attention of consumers and their advocates.

"Their persistence and pressure on federal authorities has led to a tightening and enforcing of regulations in an effort to protect the food supply. It is important that groups such as yours consider this issue as part of your basic ideals when promoting the responsible use of animals."

While Simms was not saying that only veterinarians should adminster production animal pharmaceuticals, he said that efforts are underway to make it more difficult for poor practices to exist.

In recent weeks, several articles published in Lancaster Farming discussed new regulations for dairy producers and a federally mandated milk residue and quality assurance program — if residues are found, the producer is to successfully complete a 10-point educational program, in cooperation with his veterinarian and other officials.

Simms also discussed other problems in the production livestock handling that he said has not been adequately addressed, that of "down" animals.

"Finally, it is time that everyone involved in the livestock industry center our attentions on a solution to the situation created when a farm animal is unable to move under its own power from the farm, through the market system to final disposition.

"Historically, these animals are moved by any available means (winched or lifted by tractor) onto a truck owned by a person who deals in debilitated animals.

"They are transported to a slaughter facility where a final disposition is made and the dealer is paid according to the weight and condition of the carcass.

"The animal is kept alive during this process to command maximum value.

"The producer is then paid a portion of the carcass value at the discretion of the dealer. Abuses of the system often leave the producer with very little payment or the classical 'she died on the truck' (excuse)."

Simms said that with current pressures with the number of animal activists and consumer protectionists, production livestock handlers should create a better way to treat down animals.

As a rough outline suggestion, Simms said it makes sense to move the slaughter inspection of the animal to the pickup site — the farm.

As it is now, down animals taken for slaughter must be inspected by official USDA inspectors at the slaughter house. Only recently were USDA inspectors allowed to inspect outside of the slaughter facility.

Simms said that possibly a federally approved system could be developed whereby a veterinarian (who is authorized to inspect meat animals for consumption) or an USDA-licensed technician would travel to the farm, inspect and stun and bleed the down animal, which would then be put on a refrigerated truck to be taken to the plant for further processing.

He said he hasn't had the opportunity to delve into the specific requirements which would need to be done in order for such a down-animal treatment system to occur, but he that he is presenting his idea in the hopes that someone may develop it into a practical solution to the current situation.

Other speakers discussed a variety of issues, ranging from sport hunting as it is used by the state Game Commission in wildlife management, as well as other management techniques they employ; to continued calls for actively promoting the truth about production animal care.

William McCoy, president of Lancaster Stock Yards Inc.; talked about his ordeal attempting to deal with animal activists and the problems with protesters and down animals and his eventually instituting a "no-downer" policy.

He urged producers to clean up "our act" to make sure to be good husbandrymen, to keep animals in a clean healthy environment and to not ship obviously sick, down or non-merchandisable animals to market. He urged instead to have them picked up at the farm and or euthanized on the farm.

He said other market operators should discourge the shipment of such "downer" animals by refusing them or adding a surcharge to cover the cost of handling them; assess a fee on buyers who do not remove their animals in a reasonable amount of time; and "encourage legislation to promote the beneficial handling and raising of HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farmers Association publishes information for its members to help them know the state's cruelty to animals law and what the members' responsibilities are under that law.

In an effort to better inform non-members as well, the PFA has granted permission for its adivsory publication. Copies are available through the PFA, at P.O. Box 8736, Camp Hill, 17001-8736.

Special notice is that all the material provided is for information purposes only and is not intended to be used in any manner to express a legal opinon or provide legal advise. Attorneys should be sought for legal opinions.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS LAW

1. What is the "Cruelty to Animals Law" and what does the law do? The Cruelty to Animals Law is the principal statute that prescribes a person's responsibilities in the care and treatment of animals in Pennsylvania. The Cruelty to Animals Law is found in Section 5511 of the Pennsylvania Crimes Code.

2. What animals are protected under the Cruelty to Animals Law? The Cruelty to animals Law protects animals that fall within the categories of "domestic animals", "domestic fowl" and "zoo animals". Domestic animals include dogs, cats, horses, cattle, sheep, goats or swine. Domestic fowl include any bird that is raised for food purposes or as a hobby or sport (§5511 (q)).

3. What activities are not intended to be regulated under the Cruelty to Animals Law? The Cruelty to Animals Law does not: a. Prohibit or hinder any activity that is authorized under the Game Code to be performed on game or wildlife (§ 5511 (p)); b. Prohibit the killing of an animal while such animal is in the act of destroying another domestic animal or fowl (§ 5511 (a)); c. Prohibit reasonable activity in connection with vermin or pest control (§ 5511 (a)); d. Prohibit activity undertaken by a farmer in normal agricultural operation relative to farm animals (§ 551 1 (c)).

4. What activities are considered to be performed in "normal agricultural operation"? The Law defines "normal agricultural operation" as "normal activities, practices and procedures that farmers adopt, use or engage in year after year in the production and preparation for market of poultry, livestock and their products and in the production and harvesting of agricultural, agronomic, horticultural, silvicultural and aquacultural crops and commodities".

5. Am I exempt from the Cruelty to Animals Law if I am raising farm animals as pets rather than as farm product commodities? No. The "normal agricultural operation" exemption from Cruelty to Animals requirements only applies to commercial farm operations. If the person is not a farmer, he may be violating the Cruelty to Animals Law, even though the treatment of his animals may not differ from that normally applied by a farmer in normal agricultural operation.

6. Does the Cruelty to Animals Law permit me to shoot a domestic animal, domestic fowl or zoo animal that is threatening to kill or has killed my livestock or poultry? The Cruelty to Animals Law only permits the killing of any protected animal while the animal is actually engaged in the act of killing another protected animal. However, the Pennsylvania Dog Law does permit a person to kill a dog observed by that person to be in the act of pursuing or wounding livestock or poultry. Neither the Cruelty to Animals Law nor the Dog Law permits the killing of a protected animal after it is

Other Small Seeded Legumes-- Where Do They Fit?

Alfalfa is certainly our most productive perennial forage legume--on soils where alfalfa is adapted. And in my next column I hope to highlight this year's national alfalfa seed conference scheduled in early March. But there are a number of other small seeded legumes that are well adapted in the Northeast and satisfactory on soils where alfalfa is not adapted. Let's take a brief look at several of these and see where they fit in today's forage and conservation programs.

Red Clover

Red clover, the most widely grown legume in this area of Pennsylvania, is considered a short lived, multi-cut perennial legume. It is generally both shorter lived and less productive than alfalfa. However, it is more tolerant of acid, somewhat poorly drained soils and is highly suited for short rotations. Most varieties are of the early flowering type, normally referred to as medium red clover. Red clover is one of the easiest legumes to establish using either conventional or no-till techniques. On the other hand, red clover is difficult to field dry for hay, so must or mold in hay are frequently a problem.

Disease resistance, especially to northern and southern anthracnose, and possible powdery mildew, is important in red clover varieties. Varieties with resistance or tolerance to these diseases have the potential of an extra year of production and added yield. However, even with disease resistant varieties soil borne insects such as clover root curculio may limit stand persistance beyond that one full year of production.

Mammoth red clover, the late flowering, single-cut type, usually produces one crop plus a limited aftermath. Its use in the Northeast is generally limited to plowdown and cover crop.

Birdsfoot Trefoil

This deep-rooted, perennial legume is normally less productive than alfalfa on soils where alfalfa is adapted. It is especially well suited to the less-well drained, somewhat acid soils of northern and western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio, New York, and New England. However, it has also been grown successfully in more southerly areas. It is suitable for pasture, hay and conservation plantings and is bloatfree, with no case of bloat ever recorded in animals grazing on trefoil.

Newer varieties of birdsfoot trefoil such as Norcen tend to be intermediate in growth habit as compared to the more upright, early flowering Viking and more prostrate, late flowering Empire varieties.

The seedling growth rate of birdsfoot trefoil is slower than that of alfalfa or red clover. And this, along with occasional limited seed supplies of improved varieties, has discouraged many farmers from making greater use of this important legume. Hopefully, with newer, more disease resistant varieties, better seeding techniques and improved seed supplies the use of birdsfoot trefoil for forage purposes will be expanded in the years ahead.

Crownvetch

Crownvetch is the purple flowered, perennial legume that spreads by creeping roots and by seed and is the most widely used legume along Pennsylvania highways. It is later in maturity than alfalfa, red clover and the up-right growing varieties of birdsfoot trefoil with forage yields similar to that of trefoil. Used primarily for road bank stabilization and land reclamation crownvetch is also satisfactory for pasture and may likewise be harvested as silage.

The variety Penngift which originated in Pennsylvania is the primary variety that is currently commercially available. It will grow on well- to moderately-well drained soils and is more tolerant of acid soils than alfalfa. It does, however, respond to lime, phosphorus and potassium fertilization.

Crownvetch is known to establish relatively slowly from seed. However, once established it spreads over a wide area producing a vigorous, dense vegetation that effectively suppresses weed growth. It is usually spring seeded on a firm, well prepared seedbed either alone or with one of several forage grasses, but may also be seeded using the no-till system.

Other small seeded legumes frequently grown in Pennsylvania and Ohio as well as other Northeastern states include ladino clover, alsike clover, sweet clovers, lespedeza and flatpea.

Ladino clover, a large white clover, makes a high-quality pasture for livestock, even though it can cause bloat, and does well in years with frequent rain. Unfortunately it has a shallow root system and lacks sufficient drought tolerance to survive long dry periods.

Alsike clover, on the other hand, is a weak perennial that will grow on wet, acid soils but is not normally considered an important pasture or hay plant because of its sensitivity to heat and dry soils.

Both yellow-flowered and white-flowered forms of sweetclover, mainly biennials, are marketed in this area and are used primarily for soil improvement, seldom for hay and only occasionally for silage. Commonly avail-no longer in the act of preying on any other animal.

7. Does the Cruelty to Animals Law permit me to shoot wildlife that is damaging my crops? The Cruelty to Animals Law does not apply to the shooting of any wildlife in accordance with privileges provided under the Pennsylvania Game Code. A farmer lawfully exercising his privilege to kill game or wildlife causing crop damage to his farm would not be in violation of the Cruelty to Animals Law.

8. What activities are Prohibited under the Cruelty to Animals Law?

A. A person commits a summary offense under the Cruelty to Animals Law (penalty of up to $300 fine and/or up to 90 days in jail) for: 1. Selling, bartering or giving away baby chicks under 1 month of age or rabbits under 2 months of age as pets, or coloring or dyeing any bird or rabbit. (§ 5511 (b)); 2. Selling, riding, driving or transporting any diseased, lame or disabled horse, except to further the humane care, treatment or destruction of the animal (§ 5511 (d)); 4. Transporting an animal in a cruel and inhumane manner (§ 5511 (e)); 5. Permitting a horse to be ridden, driven or worked more than 15 hours per day or 90 hours per week (§ 551 1 (f)); 6. Kneading, beating or padding a cow udder or willfully allowing a cow to go unmilked for 24 hours, for the purpose of enhancing the appearance or size of the udder, or preventing a cow's calf less than 6 weeks old from nourishment and thereby relieving the cow's udder for 24 hours (§ 5511 (9)); 7. Cropping or cutting off the ears of a dog by a person other than a veterinarian (§ 5511 (h)); 8. Killing, maiming or detaining any homing pigeon carrying the name of its owner (§ 5511 (k)); 9. Skinning any dog or cat or selling or bartering any dog or cat pelts (§ 5511 (n)).

B. A person commits a misdemeanor of the second degree under the Cruelty to Animals Law (penalty of up to $5,000 fine and/or up to 2 years in jail) for: 1. Willfully and maliciously killing, maiming or disfiguring a domestic animal or domestic fowl owned by another person (§ 5511 (a) (1)); 2. Willfully and maliciously poisoning or anempting to poison a domestic animal or domestic fowl owned by another person (§ 5511 (a) (1)).

C. A person commits a felony of the third degree under the Cruelty to Animals Law (penalty of up to $15,000 fine and/or up to 7 years in jail) for: 1. Willfully and maliciously killing, maiming, disfiguring, poisoning or attempting to poison a zoo animal in captivity (§ 5511 (a) (2)); 2. Conducting, participating in, betting on, watching or permitting on the premises any organized activity of animal fighting (§ 5511 (h.1) ).

9. Who can enforce the Cruelty to Animals Law? Any officer who has authority to enforce the Crimes Code, such as a police officer, has authority to enforce the Cruelty to Animals Law. In addition, certain officers of societies or associations for the prevention of cruelty to animals (such as the local Humane Society or local S.P.C.A.) may have the power to enforce the Cruelty to Animals Law. These animal welfare officers must receive such enforcement authority from your local court.

10. Is the animal welfare officer required to carry any form of identification while he is enforcing the Cruelty to Animals Law? Yes. A person appointed by the court to enforce the Cruelty to Animals Law, when on duty, is required to wear a badge which indicates the person is a "special police officer" and which indicates the organization which the officer represents (Title 22, § 501 (c)).

11. What powers do animal welfare officers have in the enforcement of the Cruelty to Animals Law? The Law specifically states that animal welfare officers have the same powers to initiate criminal actions against offenders as police officers (§ 5511 (i)). Animal welfare officers have the authority to issue citations against individuals in the case of summary violations and to seek and execute arrest warrants or to make arrests without warrant based on probable cause in the case of misdemeanor and felony violations. Animal welfare officers also have authority to seek and obtain search warrants and to carry out searches of private property pursuant to such warrants and may seize from the owner animals upon which violations of the Law have been committed (§ 5511 (j) and (1)). Officers may make arrangements for food, shelter, medical care or other activities reasonably necessary for the proper care of animals seized at the expense of the animal owner, including the humane destruction of the animal if circumstances justify such action.

12. Are animal welfare officers subject to any limitations in enforcing the Cruelty to Animals Law? Yes. No enforcement officer, including an animal welfare officer, is permitted to conduct any unreasonable arrests or conduct any unreasonable searches and seizures of property on private lands. Arrests or searches pursuant to a validly issued arrest or search warrant are reasonable. However, where no warrant has been issued, an officer may only conduct a search of a premises and make an arrest where the officer has probable cause that a violation has been committed on the premises by an individual.

13. What is meant by the term "probable cause"? Generally, the term requires that an officer receive before he acts such facts and information which would lead a reasonably prudent and cautious person, acting conscientiously, to believe that a violation has occurred. Probable cause means more than a mere suspicion, hunch or belief, without any supporting facts or information. However, probable cause can be established through an officer's own observations of criminal activity or through the observations and statements of a reliable person who has witnessed such activity.

14. Does an animal welfare officer need probable cause to search my farm if I give him permission to do so? No. Even without a search warrant, if the owner or lessor of private property gives an officer permission to search a premises, probable cause is not needed and searches pursuant to permission granted to an officer are not unreasonable.

15. Am I permitted to threaten or physically interfere with an officer whom I believe is making an improper search or arrest on my property? No. The fact that an officer may be acting improperly in the performance of his duties does not give a private individual the right to intimidate or threaten the officer or use physical force against the officer while the officer is in performance of his duties. A private individual can be held criminally liable for attempting to directly interfere with an animal welfare officer performing enforcement actions, regardless of whether or not the actions of the officer are legally proper.

16. What protections do I have against illegal searches or arrests performed against me? If a search or arrest is determined to be improper, none of the evidence obtained by the officer as a result of his improper search or arrest can be used as evidence in any criminal prosecution brought against you. Also, an officer and his organization or government agency can be held civilly liable for damages resulting from improper actions conducted by the officer against you.

17. What should I do to protect myself against potential problems with the Cruelty to Animals Law? There is no golden formula to totally protect you against attempts to charge you with Cruelty to Animals violations, no matter how unreasonable. However, several things are recommended to help minimize your risks and will help you defeat these attempts:

1. Have your animals examined on a regular basis by your veterinarian and keep up-to-date health records of your animals.

2. Conduct periodic inspections on your farm for conditions which, if observed by an outsider, could mislead that individual into believing that your animals are not being properly treated.

3. Minimize as much as practically possible the ability of persons outside your farm to observe your animals or animal husbandry practices performed on your animals. Too often, a farmer's problems result from the observations made by an outside individual who is not familiar with modern animal husbandry practices.

4. Avoid killing or seriously wounding a domestic animal who strays onto your property, unless the lives of you, your family or your animals are immediately threatened by the stray and killing or seriously wounding the stray is the only available means to overcome the threat.

5. When confronted by an officer, treat him with respect, but do not give him permission to inspect any portion of your farm without a proper search warrant, unless you are absolutely sure you wish to waive your rights. If you do not wish to waive your rights, respectfully inform the officer that you are not authorizing the officer to perform without a search warrant any inspection or searches of any portion of your farm.

6. If the officer attempts to conduct an inspection or search of your farm without your permission, do not attempt to physically stop or interfere with his actions or to make any threats against him. However, make a reasonable effort to witness and note and to have others witness and note the actions performed by the officer.

7. Immediately contact your attorney and seek advice and assistance in determining what you should and should not do in response to the officer.

Foraging Around

able varieties normally contain sizable amounts of the compound, coumarin, which gives new-mown sweetclover its characteristic odor and results in reduced palatability of the forage to livestock.

Lespedezas are used fairly widely in the south for pasture, hay and soil conservation, but are seldom used today in the Northeast. Serecia, the perennial form is fairly coarse growing and is occasionally seeded for conservation or wildlife cover. Korean, the annual form, was at one time grown commonly in the upper south on sandy soils as an annual hay crop. Yields are generally fairly low.

You may not have heard much about flatpea. It's really not a small seeded legume and its use for forage will likely be very limited. Until the variety Lathco was recently released here in the Northeast, there was very little seed of flatpea available. However, it has a spreading root system and is especially well suited for use in establishing cover under transmission lines, roadsides, spoil banks and similar areas and should be much more widely used in these areas.
